Reeds Canarygrass 'Saves' Grazier From Drought

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — Reeds canarygrass may have saved the season, literally, for internationally known grazier Dave Forgey.

Forgey, of River-View Farm in Logansport, Ind., told about 200 graziers and agri-industry representatives Wednesday that during last summer's severe drought on his farm, the root system of the grass held up well even during very heavy grazing.

Penn State Students National Beef Quiz Champions

Students from Penn State University's College of Agriculture Sciences were named National Collegiate Beef Quiz Bowl champions at the 2000 National Cattlemen's Beef Association Annual Convention recently in Phoenix, Ariz. The quiz bowl competition is sponsored by the National Cattlemen's Foundation, a charitable institution whose mission is to promote the future of the beef industry through research and education. Members of the Penn State team are, from left, Ellen Angstadt, Milford Square, a junior in animal sciences; Beth McAllister, Center Hall, a junior majoring in ag business management and minoring in animal sciences; Heather Oberholtzer, Elizabethtown, a senior in animal sciences; Kevin Harvatine, Thompson, a junior in animal sciences; and Dr. Erskin Cash, adviser. Other teams competing included Brigham Young University, Michigan State University, and the University of Kentucky. The teams earned the privilege of competing by winning their sectional competition in the American Society of Animal Science Academic Quadrathalon. Penn State has represented the northeast region seven of the last eight years, winning the contest four times and taking second twice.

Wayne County Farmer Sees Volunteering As Crucial Part Of Operation

D. Ellis Dix received the Clyde Robison Award from the Pennsylvania DHIA last week. The award honored him for the leadership he provides, both in agriculture and in his community. Photo provided by the Dix family

PLEASANT MOUNTAIN (Wayne Co.) — D. Ellis Dix is a dairy farmer who believes it's his responsibility to serve as a leader in the farm organizations that represent him.

"It is just as important as my work on the farm," said Dix. "If we are going to have these organizations benefiting farmers and make them work successfully, then somebody has to be there and encourage others to do the same."

Dix was awarded the Clyde Robison Leadership Award during last week's Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association (DHIA) annual meeting. It's an award that Dix is very honored to have received.

"There are a lot of farmers around the state who are very deserving of it," he said. "I really wasn't expecting it, but I will do my best to live up to the expectations of the award."

Dairy Day Message: 'Get Bigger, Better, Or Out'

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

EAST SMITHFIELD (Bradford Co.) — "Get Bigger, get better or get out," were three choices presented to Bradford County dairy farmers at the 2000 Dairy Day program by Gary Snider, a farm business consultant with Farm Credit of Western New York.

Snider gave his presentation on "Specialization and the New Dairy Industry" at the daylong event Monday, Feb. 21, at SRU High School.

More than 500 people had the opportunity to hear Snider's presentation as well as mingle with industry representatives, attend other educational programs or take advantage of free health screenings and tetanus shots.

Snider's initial presentation focused on the changing landscape of the dairy industry. He challenged farmers to consider where they fit in this changing industry by looking at their strengths and weaknesses.

"There is more milk being produced in the United States today than in any time in history," noted Snider, "and it's a trend that began about 100 years ago. But the landscape's changing out here. There's a tremendous amount of change, and I think the questions we have to

NORTHEAST BROILER/FRYER PARTS - PART I FEDERAL-STATE

Trucklot buying interest was generally slow today and many dealers were hoping for an increase in activity this weekend for first of the month business. Offerings of bone-in breasts contined short of needs and all other items were generally adequate. Retail and distributive movement was about fair. The market tone continued firm on bone-in breasts and usually steady on the remainder of parts.

PRICES PAID PER POUND, ICE PACKED BROILER/FRYER PARTS, DELIVERED TO FIRST RECEIVERS IN POOL TRUCKLOT AND TRUCKLOT QUANTITIES.

NY Phil Frozen Eggs

ATLANTA, GA.
FEBRUARY 25, 2000

EASTERN REGION FROZEN EGGS, FEBRUARY 25, 2000. FEDERAL-STATE

Prices generally trended unchanged to lower when compared to a week earlier, however whites were in the best position. Trading was light as buyers wait on further market developments. The undertone was unsettled and somewhat cautious. Liquid and frozen eggs (ingredients included) processed under federal inspection in the Eastern region for the week ending February 19, 2000 were 3% more than last week, and unchanged when compared to a year ago. Shell egg supplies were fully adequate for full trade needs.

NATIONAL EGG MARKET - AT A GLANCE

Prices were unchanged. The market tone ranged steady to about steady at current price levels. Demand was usually light to fair, at times moderate, with best movement centering around planned promotional activity. Supplies of all sizes were mostly adequate to available, instances burdensome. Breaking stock supplies were adequate to fully adequate from regular sources, and demand for additional product was limited beyond normal committments. Light type fowl were fully adequate for current slaughter needs.

Delmarva Broiler

ATLANTA, GA.

DELMARVA BROILER/FRYER MARKET. FEDERAL-STATE

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was good on the adequate to short supply of 3 pound and heavier sizes; fair on the fully adequate supply of lighter weights. Live supplies were mostly moderate; weights were mostly desirable. Processing schedules were moderate to moderately heavy. Less than truckiot asking prices were 1 cent higher at 47 to 59 cents. Trade sentiment was fully steady to firm. Bone-in breasts were no more than adequate. Boneless skinless breasts were adequate and clearing well. Leg quarters and wings were in fairly good balance. ACTUAL SLAUGHTER WEEK ENDING 02/26/2000 WAS 11,422,335 5.12 #.

National Grain Market

St. Joseph, MO
Wed Mar 01, 2000
USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News
Daily National Grain Market Summary

Wheat bids continued to climb higher on crop concerns in dry areas of Texas and export optimism. Corn and soybean bids turned lower after two days of higher trends. Slowed export sales and improved soil con- dition after recent moisture in the Midwest, weighed on bids. Wheat 1 to 5 cents higher. Corn 1 to 7 cents lower. Sorghum 2 cents lower. Soybeans 2 to 7 cents lower. Continued news that China may need to import wheat due to tight stocks kept wheat bids moving higher. Another Chinese wheat team will be in the US in April. Light overnight orders and indications Morocco will tender for 4 million bushels of soft wheat tomorrow, also supported bids. Export interest has been slow this week for corn and beans. More rain overnight hit the Midwest and Corn Belt areas and improving soil moisture levels. Spring planting is near and some places may start early down south.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

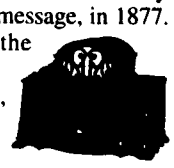
ASH WEDNESDAY, MARCH 8.

MARCH MESSAGES

On March 7, 1876, Alexander Graham Bell received the patent for the device he called the telephone. Three days later, he transmitted the first complete comprehensible sentence: "Mr. Watson, come here, I want you." By contrast, the first Morse code telegraph message (May 1844) had queried, "What hath God wrought?" A year later, Thomas Edison chose "Mary had a little lamb" for his first recorded message, in 1877. By the 20th century, radio offered the chance to wax eloquent in greater length Just six days into office, on March 12, 1933, Franklin Delano Roosevelt sat by the White House hearth and began the first of his radio broadcast "fireside chats."



Words are what hold society together.

–Stuart Chase

TIP OF THE WEEK

CHICKEN & SALSA PITAS

1 tablespoon olive oil
1/2 pound boneless chicken, cubed
1 clove garlic, minced
1/4 teaspoon cumin
1 can (16 ounces) black beans, drained
1 can (10 ounces) corn, drained juice from 1 lime
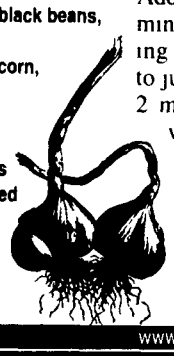
1/2 cup salsa
4 large pita pockets
sour cream or grated cheese, as garnish



Heat oil in a skillet and cook chicken and garlic until chicken is done, about 5 minutes Add cumin, sauté for one minute, then add remaining ingredients and cook to just heat through, about 2 minutes Meanwhile, warm pitas in 350°F oven for 3 to 4 minutes Spoon mixture into pockets and garnish with sour cream or grated cheese

Makes 4 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

A new Moon with a north wind will hold until the full (Mar. 19).

If the dog refuses meat, it is a sign of rain.

As much dew as shown in March, so much fog rises in August.

The Building you want. The Lease you need.

Telmark has been leasing equipment for over 30 years. Did you know that we've been leasing new buildings for that long too? Consider:

- Tax deductibility and accelerated write-offs: Lease payments are income tax deductible over the term of the lease compared to 20-year depreciation of farm buildings and 39-year depreciation of commercial buildings. Could reduce tax liability this year.
- Low upfront costs: As little as one monthly lease payment.
- Flexible lease term: Building lease terms from five to fifteen years.
- Customized payment schedules: Lease payment schedules are specially designed to match your cash flow.

First: Talk with a qualified builder to determine your needs and building cost.
Then: Call your Telmark representative for your financing.

Lancaster Farming

OPINION

Not A Farmer vs. Hunter Situation

We may see some objective deer management practices put into place in the near future if the report from a Lancaster hunter's meeting is any indication of a new trend in thinking about the subject. Dr. Gary Alt, who heads the Pennsylvania Game Commission's new deer management section, told the more than 300 hunters in the meeting to get ready for fewer deer. The reason? Too many deer are eating Pennsylvania's forests to death.

Ad Crable, New Era staff writer, reports that unless hunters are willing to tolerate fewer deer in the short term and join together to rebuild healthy woods, they stand to lose their beloved sport to a non-hunting public on the verge of an uprising.

Motorists are fed up with crashing into deer. And environmentalists want to see native plants and woods-loving birds and an ecosystem in balance. But it's farmers who really lose financially when they have as many deer in their pastures, hay fields and cornfields as they have cows in the milking barn.

Up until now, the farmer's voice has been largely disregarded. The general public doesn't care how much the farmer loses in crop production as long as the beautiful white tail can get fat and multiply on alfalfa and corn. But now that hunters can't find buck in the woods because they don't have enough food, thinning the deer herd seems more palatable.

"The expectations go way beyond hunting," Dr. Alt warned. "We have very damaged forests. We are either going to fix this problem, or it's going to fix us."

We suspect that many of the deer have left these damaged forests for the hay-field feeding grounds many miles away from the woods. And to be successful, any plan to bring the deer population into balance with nature will need to take into consideration this crop-predator phenomena that is also part of the deer management equation. We hasten to say that many farmers are hunters and they like to show off the big trophy buck they bagged the first day of hunting as well as anyone.

This is not a farmer vs. hunter situation. It's about the need for proper conservation management of a wild animal specie that has been deprived of its natural enemies to keep its numbers in control. It's gratifying that we may now have someone in the proper place in the state game commission who has a vision to do something about it.

Now Is The Time

By John Schwartz

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Form Agricultural Security Areas

In 1981 Pennsylvania passed the Agricultural Area Security Law.

Agricultural Security Areas are a tool for strengthening and protecting agriculture in Pennsylvania. These are areas in which agriculture is the primary activity. Participating farmers are entitled to special considerations from local and state government agencies, thus encouraging the continuing use of the land for productive agricultural purposes. The local government unit may not impose ordinances that unreasonably restrict farm structures or practices within the Area, nor may normal farming operations and practices be deemed "nuisances" in a nuisance ordinance. If we are to maintain farming in townships, local farmers must take steps to insure local officials support modern farming operations. Local citizen groups opposed to modern farming practices are hiring attorneys and consultants to help them encourage township supervisors to enact ordinances to protect against new "factory farms". The future of your farm business could depend on you being in an Agricultural Security Area with township ordinances that support agricultural development and growth in these Areas.

To Have The Right Attitude About Vegetable Production

Many farmers are considering growing vegetables as a way to increase farm income or an alternative crop to tobacco. However, many farmers have the wrong perception what it takes to grow vegetables. Many are approaching vegetable growing as an extension of the family garden.

This will probably lead to failure. If you are considering growing vegetables, you need to approach this farm enterprise the same way as any other farm enterprise. Jeff Stoltzfus, Eastern Lancaster County School District Adult Farmer Instructor, gives these tips to new vegetable growers. Use plastic mulch. Use drip irrigation. Spread out your plantings. Have a plan as to how you are going to market your crops. Learn the spray and culture program for your crops. and Concentrate on a few crops. Remember, to be successful in vegetable production you will need to invest your time in learning about vegetable production, labor to produce crop and market the crop and money to buy the necessary equipment and supplies to produce a marketable crop. If you are not willing to make these investments, you should not consider vegetable farming.

To Grow Vegetables Correctly

Jeff Stoltzfus, Eastern Lancaster County School District Adult Farmer Instructor, offers the following tips for farmers starting out in vegetable production.

1. Use plastic mulch and drip irrigation. In addition to better yields and more uniform fruit, they provide some weed control, disease control and optimum moisture throughout the season.
2. Know your market. If you are growing for the auction, know the varieties the buyers like. Unpopular varieties are heavily discounted. Roadside market customers may like some varieties that are hard to sell at the auction.
3. Concentrate on a few crops. Many new growers start out with too many crops and have difficulty managing them. Pick a couple of crops to start with. Add other crops as your expertise grows.
4. Learn all you can about the crops you are growing.

IS CHRIST DIVIDED?
March 5, 2000
Background Scripture:
1 Corinthians 1:1-17
Devotional Reading:
1 Corinthians 1:18-25

Paul's first letter to the church at Corinth is probably one which he would have preferred not to have to write. It is a deeply concerned letter to a "problem church" courting disaster. The situation is doubly disturbing because this church was clearly one of Paul's favorites. He himself had founded it and labored diligently to nurture it. Now, however, the Corinthian church was struggling, not only within itself, but also with Paul. So, we might expect him to begin this crucial letter in a somber or even angry tone.

Paul, however, begins with thanksgiving because he finds both good news and bad news reaching him from Corinth. The good news was that the church in Corinth was spiritually gifted, advanced in their understanding of Christ, and eloquent in proclaiming the gospel. For all of this Paul is deeply thankful to God and he begins his letter with praise, instead of reproach: "I give thanks to God always for you because the grace of God which was given you in Christ Jesus, that in every way you are enriched in him with all speech and all knowledge . . . so that you are not lacking in any spiritual gift. . . " (1:4,5,7). Paul is saying in effect, you people are wonderfully blessed with spiritual riches.

Now, is Paul merely buttering them up before he gets down to brass tacks? Is this just a clever technique for winning them back to his leadership? Or is it indicative that Paul sees some things in this church that the people there have been missing. Is Paul trying to help them see some strengths and graces that they are overlooking?

Focusing on the 'Bad News'

Perhaps you have noticed that, when there are difficulties and disappointments in life, we seem able to concentrate only what we are losing or have lost.

Because we focus on failure, defeat and hopelessness, that is all we see. If you believe you are going to hear only 'bad news,' that is exactly what you are going to hear. The problem is not whether there is any bad news, but whether that is all the news there is.

I have known some 'problem churches' over the years and I have found that Paul is right: every church has assets as well as liabilities. If we can't find those positives, it is most likely because we are just focusing on the negatives. You will never solve problems and conflicts in the church so long as you fail to take your eyes off the negatives.

Having begun with the good news, Paul turns to the bad news which can be viewed now from the platform of the good news. In other words, the problems of the Corinthian church can now be seen from the perspective of what is right with the Corinthian church. Paul says, "For it has been reported to me by Cloe's people that there is quarreling among you, my brethren." This quarreling has caused the Christian community to split into factions; Paul's people, Apollo's people, Cephas's people and some who haughtily call themselves "Christ's people."

We Can Over Come

Note that Paul doesn't regard this as a hopeless situation. He still thinks that there is an opportunity to overcome the factions. "I appeal to you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that all of you agree and that there be no dissensions among you, but that you may be united in the same mind and the same judgment" (1:10).

Then he asks a question which is just as necessary today as it was then: "Is Christ divided?" (1:13). If we base our discipleship on Jesus Christ and him alone, then we cannot, must not, be divided, because Christ himself is undivided.

Whenever there are factions in the church, we must ask: "Is Christ divided?" Whenever barriers keep us from greeting, embracing and joining ourselves in witness and service with other followers of Christ in his name, we must ask ourselves: "Is Christ divided?" When we identify ourselves and our faith, not primarily in the name of Jesus Christ, but of John Wesley, Martin Luther, John Calvin and you fill-in the blanks–we must ask that question and be obedient when God thunders or whispers–"NO!"

High-quality CLAAS® equipment satisfies your need for nutrient-rich silage

CLAAS offers a full line of equipment for nutrient-rich silage. Produce perfectly formed, dense bales with today's most reliable, technologically advanced heavy-duty fixed chamber and variable chamber round balers. Many models are available with the optional ROTO CUT® cutting system that pre-processes silage and adds greater density to each bale and choice of ROLLATEX® net wrap or twine. Disc mower conditioners, with heavy-duty cutter bars and your choice of roller or tine conditioner, follow ground contours for clean, even cutting. Reliable, heavy-duty tedders with 6 tine arms per rotor accelerate dry down. Dependable, heavy-duty rotary rakes, single and twin, with tandem axles produce uniform, fluffy windrows.

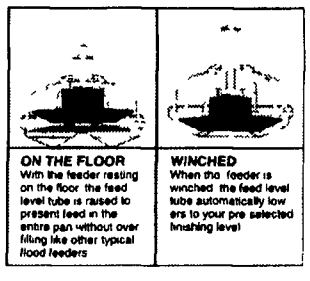
QUICK-START

The Pax QUICK-START™ pan feeding system grows chicks into FINISHED broilers efficiently.

Start chicks with the feeder resting on the floor and the feed pan entirely filled The Pax QUICK-START™ pan provides easy access to plenty of fresh feed – with no accumulation of stale feed in the drop tube – attracting even the smallest chicks to begin feeding right away



ON THE FLOOR
With the feeder resting on the floor the feed level tube is raised to present feed in the entire pan without overfilling like other typical flood feeders
WINCHED
When the feeder is winched the feed level tube automatically lowers to your pre selected finishing level

Feed Storage and Delivery Systems

Flexible Auger for Low Volume, Standard Volume, High Volume, as well as High Moisture (up to 25%) and pellet applications.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

By Ken Bailey
Penn State University
February 25, 2000

-Butter Prices Strengthed
-Butter closes Friday at $0.95/lb
-January pool data available
-March Class I prices out

Butter prices showed surprising strength this week at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Grade AA price rose to $0.9225 per pound on Wednesday, February 23 to $0.95 per pound by Friday, February 25. USDA reports that stocks are now more than double December levels and well ahead of year ago levels. In addition, demand for butter is reported to be fair at best.

Higher butter prices at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange will result in higher NASS survey prices. That in turn will result in a higher advance butterfat pricing factor and will raise the Class I mover. Also, a higher monthly average NASS butter price will raise Class II, III and IV prices.

Cheese prices at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange did not budge much this week. Block prices fluctuated between $1.10 and $1.11 per pound. Barrell prices were $1.10 per pound. It is unusual to have such a tight margin between blocks and barrels.

USDA announced some interesting numbers on milk production for 1999. There were 111,200 dairy operations in business in 1999, 5.1 percent less than the year before. Dairy operations with 1-29 cows represented 29.8 percent of all operations, but only 2.0 percent of all milk produced. On the other hand, milk operations with over 2000 head represented just 0.2 percent of the number of operations, but accounted for 9.3 percent of all milk produced.

USDA also reported milk production for 50 states in 1999. The top 5 states for growth in 1999 were Idaho (11.9 percent), California (10.2 percent), Arizona (9.4 percent), Nebraska and New Mexico (8.5 percent each). States with the largest declines (excluding Hawaii) in 1999 were Missouri (-6.2 percent), Road Island (-6.1 percent), Tennessee (-5.6 percent), Louisiana (-5.3 percent), and Arkansas (-5.2 percent).

MILK AMERICA'S HEALTH KICK

Shaping the future with 4-H and FFA.

First Union's Agri-Finance Department is proud to support 4-H and FFA members and programs. We believe preserving the family farm is one of the most effective ways to ensure a better future for everyone. So First Union is committed to working with young people and supporting their goals.

With guidance and encouragement, they will develop the skills and values they'll need to be successful in farming or wherever their lives take them. And their achievements will benefit us all.

Winning the Presidential Election May Be As Easy As Loving Cheese

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)–If life imitates art, a presidential candidate's position on cheese might indeed become a hot issue in the upcoming primary elections.

Capitalizing on the primary elections, a new 60-second cheese commercial chronicles the demise of a fictitious presidential hopeful, John Hayes, who commits political suicide when he's caught on camera voicing an unpopular platform: "I don't like cheese."

The new advertising campaign, "Ahh, the power of Cheese," launched in January with the new spot entitled "Election." The new campaign was developed by dairy farmer-funded promotion organization Dairy Management, Inc.™ and it's local affiliates such as the American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East and the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program.

The fictitious candidate is recorded by the news media in real time and the sound bite is broadcast around the nation. The reaction of the voting public is swift and harsh as seen via a series of wickedly authentic and witty vignettes. The most succinct and humorous reaction comes from America's popular, respected elder statesman, former Senator Bob Dole, who makes a winning cameo appearance.

"We wanted to capitalize on the topical nature of the primaries and add an element of realism and surprise to the commercial. Bob Dole is the perfect spokesman to deliver the unanimous judgment of the voting public," says Debra Summerall, spokesperson for PDPP.

What makes this advertising message believable is that it accurately reflects how cheese lovers, who represent 73 percent of the population, feel.

"Our consumer research indicated that cheese lovers so love cheese, they can't fathom and are even suspicious of someone who does not like cheese," Summerall says. "The universal popularity of cheese makes this advertising scenario amusing and plausible."

"Election" represents an evolution of a successful two-year advertising campaign aimed at cheese lovers. The strategic platform of this new work is that "cheese has the power to affect people deeply." In "Election," people feel so strongly about cheese that it affects their impression of someone who does not like cheese, and ultimately changes the outcome of a political campaign.

"Election" is the first of a pool of four new television executions for cheese that will launch during 2000.

The Impact of Biotech Crops

One of the biggest advancements that agriculture is currently learning to adopt and manage is the use of biotechnology in our crops. Biotech crops can offer an economic advantage to farmers with reduced pesticides, higher yields and greater flexibility. Approximately 80% of soybeans and 30% of corn acres planted in 1999 in Lancaster County included biotech seeds. Early projections for the 2000 planting season in Lancaster County estimate the same to marginally more acres with the biotech traits in the seeds. According to Ag Education and Consulting (AEC), across the United States farmers are projected to slightly decrease their overall biotech acres planted, with corn acres decreasing from 23.5% in 1999 to 17.7% in 2000 and soybean acres decreasing from 51.3% in 1999 to 48.4% in 2000. The projected decrease, especially in corn, is due to the economics of planting Bt corn in acres of the mid-west where there is little European corn bore pressure.

Although the ethical use of biotech crops may be an issue many will debate for years to come, the three American regulatory agencies that are responsible for the oversight of products using biotechnology, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA), U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) have each evaluated and approved biotech crops as safe for consumption and the environment. There has been extensive testing to ensure that crops improved by using advanced biotechnology techniques are as safe and wholesome as all of the other products it reviews.

Some proponents argue that agricultural biotechnology products destroy the environment. However, the fact is most of the biotech crops actually enhance environmental sustainability. Environmental benefits include: reduction in applications of pesticide, reduction in overall herbicide use, and the promotion of sustainable farming practices including improvements to soil and water quality and decreases in soil erosion.

Consumers that have a concern about agricultural biotechnology feel they might not be benefiting from these new products. Actually, today's biotech crops have proven their ability to reduce, and in some cases eliminate, the use of agricultural chemicals. This approach to food production provides benefits from both reduced chemicals used in the production of food and an economical production advantage to farmers which helps keep food costs down. The future of agricultural biotechnology has the potential of producing even better foods with increased product value. Some of the future products may include food oils that deliver daily allowances of vitamins, lower levels of fat and provide other nutraceutical values.

Some farmers fear that they may not have a strong market in the fall of 2000 for their grain produced using biotech crops. Here in Lancaster County and surrounding regions, farmers are primarily consuming the biotech crops they grow with livestock on their own farms and are not as dependent on grain prices, as is the mid-west. But, despite the rumors, more than 80% of grain elevators across the Corn Belt plan to accept biotech crops this fall according to the Farm Progress Companies. The majority of the elevators surveyed are not planning on even asking if the grain they receive involves biotechnology.

An important thing for concerned farmers is to watch how the marketplace reacts to biotech crops in the future. There may be heightened concern from the public in the short term until the proper education of agricultural biotechnology is explained and trusted by the consumer. But, in the long run biotech crops will have a tremendous amount to offer. Just as we have already embraced the science of biotechnology in the pharmaceutical industry, biotechnology will provide increased nutraceutical and environmental benefits to agriculture.

Dairy Day Message

ask ourselves today as producers are, what are the implications of this and where do I fit?" Snider was quick to admit that there's room for everyone in the industry.

"There are a number of things that are pushing things in the dairy industry as I see it," said Snider. "One of the things we see out there are fewer milk handlers. The whole area of milk marketing is concentrating into a smaller number of handlers. Specialization is another big change that I think is taking place in the dairy industry today."

Another shift that Snider sees, especially in western New York, are the number of satellite farms which would be run much like a subsidiary of a bigger, more established farm.

"I see an attitude change. I see an increased number of people who say we can make some money in this dairy business and we don't need to be enslaved to the business like we have been historically, and I think that's a healthy attitude," noted Snider.

The solution for many farmers is to specialize or carve out a niche in some area of expertise.

"You might think that all the opportunities are out there for the large businesses, and if we don't watch it, we'll be fooled by that thought," said Snider. He quickly admits that getting bigger is certainly not for everyone. However, he noted that everyone, no matter what the size of the farm, can get better. For some, the choice is to get out of the dairy business entirely.

"This is not an expansion seminar," noted Snider. "We have to think where we are in the industry and we have to position ourselves so we can grow. We have to run a business that's profitable. Once we get profitable, we have to grow in some areas. We need to grow every year to remain competitive," he said.

Snider pushed specialization for many growers.

"I think all of us as producers can select the part of the industry that we can participate in. If my family has decided that we're not the one to have more cows, more barns, more land, more equipment, more debt, more headaches . . . and I decide that that's not for me and I really feel very uncomfortable with that, then our opportunity is to say, 'what part of the dairy industry can I carve out for me and my business.' I think small producers have a great potential for taking a role as a specialist in the dairy industry."

Specialized roles include custom heifer raising, custom harvesting, or other portions of the business.

In order to drive his point home, Snider welcomed Marty Smith, Ron Kline, Glenn Gorrell, and Jerry Spencer to the stage. Each panelist brought a unique viewpoint to light.

Although still operating a small dairy, Marty Smith has begun a contract heifer-raising facility.

"Three years ago the milk price was bad and we had a bad crop year and we started looking at other things. First I went to work for other people. After working for myself, I found I didn't like working for others, so we looked into raising heifers," said Smith.

After careful planning and discussion, their facility was built in November 1998. In less than four months, their facilities were full.

"The banker we used to work with said there was not a market for this," noted Smith. "We proved them wrong."

The Smiths charge on a per-head per-day basis. They also take care of the necessities and whatever the client wants. They have also left options open for the future.

"We take pride in what we do," noted Smith.

For Ron Kline, bringing two sons into the business lead to a major herd expansion and the building of new facilities.

"We studied this for two years and visited lots of other facilities before we built what we have. We have left room for more expansion if we choose to do that in the future."

Expanding the milking herd still left the Klines with some dilemmas. They are considering whether to have their heifers custom raised freeing additional space for more milking cows or to continue raising their own replacements. Nutrient management requirements are also on his mind. He is looking at a system to manage the manure flow.

Many factors went into the decision to expand their herd.

Gary Snider, farm business consultant with Farm Credit of Western New York, encouraged producers to carve out a niche in today's market at the 2000 Bradford County Dairy Day.

Greg Jelliff of the Guthrie Rural Health and Safety team gives a tetanus booster shot to Richard Kauffman. The shots were provided free of charge to all participants who requested one.

A producer panel made up of Bradford County farmers illustrated Gary Snider's points about specialization. Marty Smith, a custom heifer raiser, Ron Kline, partner in a large dairy, Glenn Gorrell who intensively grazes his cows and Jerry Spencer, a custom harvester, made up the panel.

Lisa Holden, assistant professor of dairy and animal science from Penn State University, helped farmers develop a job description for their employees. She also highlighted the importance of thinking of your employees as an asset.

's room for everyone in the industry.

Forgey, who spoke during the first of a two-day Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference at the Grantville Holiday Inn, noted that as many as 160 dairy animals fed on the reeds canarygrass for about six weeks.

The conference was sponsored by the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council (PFGC) and the Penn State-USDA-ARS Grazing Research and Education Center.

"I think we have a lot to learn about reeds canarygrass," said Forgey. One farmer Forgey spoke to believes the grass is "the best crop grown on droughty soils," he noted. As a single species, according to the dairyman, it could have a place on graziers' land.

Forgey spoke both days about his eight years of grazing experience.

He made the transition in the very early '90s from a non-grazing, conventional dairy to a pasture-based, seasonal dairy.

Forgey, who has been farming since 1961, spoke about the history of his transition to the pasture-based dairying. Though the 70s were profitable with dairies, in the next decade, things changed — somewhat drastically.

In the 1980s, land values evaporated. With the severe drought of 1988, increasing cattle hoof problems, and the high price of feed and equipment, Forgey noted he had to make the decision: either change his ways or get out of the business altogether.

After attending the Illinois Forage Council meeting in 1991, Forgey realized, he said, "we were burned out. Things looked tough." He said he thought about walking away from farming.

But determined to continue as a third-generation farmer, he learned about pasture-based dairying and told his family, "I believe I found a way to save our farm."

In 1991, starting with the bred heifers, he began a small grazing operation. By 1992, he was turning out the cows on the pasture, building fence, and finding other ways to cut costs.

Forgey fenced in 120 acres and pastured 160 cows. Forgey buried water lines and, after five years of growth, Forgey had placed 280 acres in pastures. It cost him about $7,000 for the water system and about $3,000 for lanes (measuring 10 feet wide, using number 4 rock with ag lime over the top).

Additional land he purchased was in continuous corn for 40 years and had many grass problems. Forgey simply seeded rye and pastured it. Some muck soil was seeded with reeds canarygrass in 1993.

In the conference proceedings book, Forgey noted the grass "was our salvation for the '99 grazing season." They extended the rest period on the cool season grass pastures and concentrated on the reeds canarygrass. As a kind of cushion to be used in drought conditions, Forgey said, the grass continued to recover because of the water-holding capacity of the muck soils, and "frequent grazings didn't seem to hamper the vigor of the plant."

He wrote, "I have been amazed at the ability reeds has to recover and spread. In fact, the most challenging aspect of using reeds canarygrass has been trying to find a legume species that can survive under its heavy suppression."

The farm continues to sow Alsike clover on a semiannual basis, a good mate for the reeds, "but its biannual status makes it an inefficient legume for this purpose." He noted that finding a good, high-quality legume species is critical to a grazing system.

Forgey manages approximately 85 paddocks ranging from 2.5-5 acres in size. The average size of the paddock is 3.5 acres. The size of paddocks is based on anticipated consumption of the grass/legume mix.

Forgey noted that he does have a few acres of alfalfa-orchardgrass that he harvests for baleage from early May to June. In July and August, those same fields are grazed.

Forgey begins harvesting at 8 inches in height for baling. For pasturing, the reeds canarygrass was grazed at 12 inches in height for no longer than three days to ensure grass recovery. "Overgrazing tends to weaken root reserves," he said.

Forgey uses Holstein/New Zealand crossbred genetics in his herd.

Forgey noted he has seen definite improvement in the soil's organic matter since he began rotational grazing.

He also said the dairy does no winter housing. "There's been no hoof trimmer at the farm in seven years," he said.

Though his system can be complex at times, Forgey told farmers there are "more simple ways to do many of the things I did. When you're the first guy out there, you tend to do some things you wouldn't have had to do."

The conference also highlighted award winners during its recognition banquet Wednesday evening.

The PFGC Awards Program was established to recognize individuals in Pennsylvania who have made an outstanding contribution to some aspect of forage and grassland improvement in the state, according to Marvin Hall, Penn State forage specialist.

Awards are made annually when there is a worthy candidate. Following are the award recipients.

• PFGC Special Award. The Special Award is the highest recognition given by PFGC, Hall noted. It is presented to an individual or company that has made a major contribution directly to the PFGC and an outstanding contribution to Pennsylvania's forage and livestock industry and/or conservation farming. The recipients' contribution may have been in production agriculture, industry, research, extension, teaching, or other public service.

year's recipient of the PFGC Special Award. New Holland has been a strong supporting member since the PFGC was formed in 1960, according to Hall. They have provided the PFGC with two presidents — Albert Best (1979) and Mike Bular (1988) — and numerous board members throughout the PFGC's 40 year history. In addition, New Holland was a financial supporter of the 1994 AFGC Conference in Lancaster and the PFGC 40-Year History, being written. New Holland has also been an active participant in every PFGC Forage Field Day.

According to Hall, who presented the awards, considering the many contributions of New Holland to the PFGC, both past and present, "it is an honor to recognize them as the recipients of the PFGC Special Award." Accepting the award was Richard Adams, team leader for research and development at New Holland North America.

• Research/Extension/Teaching Award. This year's Research/Extension/Teaching Award recipient is Penn Jersey Extension Partnership.

The Penn Jersey Extension Partnership is an educational union between Penn State Cooperative Extension and Rutgers Cooperative Extension. The partnership recently completed 16 years of successful interstate cooperation in agricultural programming with its mission to provide enhanced and expanded educational programs that have shown positive impact on agriculture in eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey, noted Hall.

Many programming initiatives, including multiyear and multidiscipline educational programs, were undertaken to address producer needs. Some of the most successful Partnership events include pasture walks, pasture weed control demonstrations, a poisonous plant ID course, drought management newsletters, the Penn Jersey Tillage Conference, the Penn Jersey Dairy Expo, and hay quality evaluation workshops. Participants reported that the programs were valuable to them and they had applied management tools learned through the programs.

• Conservation Award. This year's Conservation Award recipient is J.B. Harrold, Project Grass coordinator of the Somerset County Conservation District. As coordinator for Project Grass, Harrold is instrumental in the establishment of rotational grazing systems in western Pennsylvania, according to Hall. Harrold oversaw the original grant that provided cost-share funds to the Project Grass counties. Numerous grazing systems have been established under this program, with Harrold developing grazing management plans, providing suggestions on grazing practices, gathering data from the established systems, and preparing reports that describe the economic, nutrient management, and air pollution control benefits of using rotational grazing systems. He is now involved in a research project to determine if fly ash can be used to construct stabilized areas associated with pastures.

According to Hall, nearby counties have seen the advantages of being a member of Project Grass since Harrold was hired. As a result, the number of member counties is growing, as is the range of impact Harrold is making on grazing management in Pennsylvania.

Harrold was recently assigned 12 more counties, which makes him in charge of all the western Pennsylvania counties. When PFGC asked Harrold what he thought of this expansion, he just said, "More research!"

Hall noted, "We feel J.B. Harrold has gone way beyond the call of duty, and deserves to be recognized with the PFGC Conservation Award."

• Conservation Farmer Award. Dale Bracken has established a rotational grazing system for beef feeders at one of his farms. Working with the Indiana County Conservation District and the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service, Bracken expanded his rotational grazing system to include 16 paddocks that cover approximately 44 acres. Dairy Day Message home, Snider welcomed Marty Smith, Ron Kline, Glenn Gorrell, and Jerry Spencer to the stage. Each panelist brought a unique viewpoint to light.

Although still operating a small dairy, Marty Smith has begun a contract heifer-raising facility.

"Three years ago the milk price was bad and we had a bad crop year and we started looking at other things. First I went to work for other people. After working for myself, I found I didn't like working for others, so we looked into raising heifers," said Smith.

After careful planning and discussion, their facility was built in November 1998. In less than four months, their facilities were full.

"The banker we used to work with said there was not a market for this," noted Smith. "We proved them wrong."

The Smiths charge on a per-head per-day basis. They also take care of the necessities and whatever the client wants. They have also left options open for the future.

"We take pride in what we do," noted Smith.

For Ron Kline, bringing two sons into the business lead to a major herd expansion and the building of new facilities.

"We studied this for two years and visited lots of other facilities before we built what we have. We have left room for more expansion if we choose to do that in the future."

Expanding the milking herd still left the Klines with some dilemmas. They are considering whether to have their heifers custom raised freeing additional space for more milking cows or to continue raising their own replacements. Nutrient management requirements are also on his mind. He is looking at a system to manage the manure flow.

Many factors went into the decision to expand their herd.

'I'm 55 years old," noted Kline. "I said, 'I've got the farm, now what do I do with it?' This is a way that I've got a retirement, my sons have equity and they can build their dream, and we all have more time for personal things."

Better debt management was one of the driving reasons behind Glenn Gorrell's decision to specialize in grazing with his 65-cow Holstein herd. After moving to Bradford County from Centre County in 1989, he noted that what really grows well in northeastern Pennsylvania is grass, so he decided to graze his cattle intensively.

"Our herd health is excellent and we can do a lot with just two people. Our debt load was high and we needed to get ahead. This way our feed costs are low," explained Gorrell.

Although he supplements the cow's diet with corn silage and hay, they get about half of their dry matter from grass during the grazing season.

"Wherever the cows can walk, it's there to graze," said Gorrell.

Jerry Spencer works at the opposite end of the dairy specialization business. As a custom harvester, Spencer relies on other farmers to make a living.

"We had a fire in 1993 and to get back into the dairy business was impossible, but I had my equipment. I already had the dairy and did some custom operations, so it was an easy decision that custom harvesting would be my niche," said Spencer.

Keys to Spencer's success is keeping the farmers happy and having adequate dealer support.

"All my farmers work together," said Spencer. "Sometimes I don't know where I'm going next. The farmers have that all worked out. I also have to depend on my dealer support. If I don't have that, I couldn't do the job."

Following the panel discussion, dairy day participants had the opportunity to attend one of four breakout sessions. Mark Madden, Penn State extension agronomist, lead a group of farmers in a discussion on weed control in corn in one session. Another talk was focused on seeking financial resources and was piloted by Gary Snider.

Debbie Bryant, Susquehanna County family living agent, guided a group of people in a session on retirement planning and Lisa Holden, assistant professor with Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science, led a seminar on employees as an asset.

In Bryant's session she reminded the group that retirement planning is not the same as estate planning.

"With an estate, you prepare to pass on your assets after you die. With retirement planning, we're thinking that we have a lot of years of living. It's how we're going to pay the bills between the day we retire and the day we die."

She also encouraged everyone to save as much as possible, and to pay into social security. "There's no one who's going to take care of us if we don't take care of ourselves." she noted. "You should pay into social security. If you don't pay in, you're not going to get it when you retire."

In the session on employees led by Lisa Holden, the importance of treating employees as an asset was at the forefront. She highlighted the need for organized recruitment, training, and motivation of employees in all situations. She also noted that it is helpful to have job descriptions and standard operating procedures for every position and task.

"Training is an investment in people," she said. "In training there is a definite process. First you prepare them for what they're going to do, then show them how to do it. Next, let them do it and finally review the steps. It's all the little things that count. A problem can start off with something very small and it can become a very large problem. That's where standard operating procedures come in."

If employee motivation is an area that needs improvement, there are incentives and bonuses that can be tied to performance.

"Incentives are an ongoing thing," said Holden, "like giving the milkers a part of the extra milk check dollars earned if the somatic cell level is kept at an acceptable level. A bonus is something special. You need to be creative."

No matter how organized the employer is, the people that you attract can make or break your operation.

Dairy Day Message

Norman L. Hershey
President, PA DHIA
Board of Directors

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.)–Fellow members of PA DHIA, Directors, Delegates, Employees, and guests, good afternoon! I am grateful for the opportunity to join with you in celebrating another successful year for PA DHIA. Later this afternoon there will be plenty of time for questions and I would hope that you would ask about anything that seems unclear.

Financially speaking we finished just slightly better than a break-even year, with a bottom line profit of $43,000. You will receive more details later in the financial report, but I can tell you that the long-term debt stands at zero. Naturally, we strive to produce a profit every year to strengthen your association, but our primary purpose is to provide a service to help you better manage your farms. I have to tell you though, this becomes increasingly difficult especially in sparse cow population areas of the state. It remains a constant challenge to provide highly motivated and properly trained technicians to travel the many miles necessary and too often, to do it for less than high pay. We simply must pay a living wage if we are to retain good technicians.

MUN tests continue to increase in both number of tests and in importance to the dairymen as they learn how to better utilize the information. One reason for that is the Nitrogen Management Report. But, the shining star in this area is our consulting service, which multiplies greatly the value of your testing dollar. We are all very proud of what is being accomplished in this area and frankly I think we've only scratched the surface of what all is possible. We remain the only DHIA in the nation to provide this service to enable you, the members, to maximize the value of your records. George Cudoc has been kept very busy serving as many of you as possible, making farm visits and conducting seminars for your benefit. This year your Board decided to put more emphasis on the district meetings in order to maintain a closer relationship with a greater number of members. Having George on the agenda for our herd management seminar was certainly a big boost in that effort. Part of his presentation was dedicated to explaining our new herd management software–Barn Owl–an amazing piece of work. And my thanks and congratulations go out to Jim Boyer and his programmers for the dedication and long hours that went into that project. We are indeed very proud of the new Windows program for dairy herd management that is a step above anything else on the market anywhere in the world today.

You know, the success of this organization really is about people. You have a great group of directors working in the boardroom. As my third year as president draws to a close, I want to say a heart felt thank you, not only for your time and effort, but also for the cooperative spirit in an earnest attempt to provide the very best product and service possible and to do it in an affordable way. You've made my job very easy and enjoyable. Your General Manager, Dave Slusser, and all the Department Heads, are great people and work hard for all of us. To all of the other folks at the Service Center and the many people in Field Service spread across the state–Thank You to each and everyone–it is your work and attitude on the job that really determines whether or not we have a satisfied customer.

Two years ago, our Board of Directors as part of our strategic long range plan, gave General Manager Slusser directive to pursue alliances or partnering with other organizations in any way that would help us either expand our service or provide service in a more cost efficient manner. He was to take a look at anything that would help us save money or spread our cost over more cows. Dave has done that in partnering in one way or another with Genex, Sire Power, and Dairy Farmers of America. Recently he has been expanding that effort by about the width of the globe. I was able to join Dave in traveling to Poland this past year. While there we held semi-

"People are key. You want to always have the best people. The reality is that dairies compete with other dairies for employees. It's really all about people. That's the bottom line."

After attending the learning seminars, dairy day participants could take time to visit with the exhibitors, get a massage from the Guthrie Rural Health and Safety representatives, or bid on one of the winning pies from the pie auction, which raised $540 for Bradford County youth programs and the dairy princess program.

After all the activities were completed, Bradford County Agricultural Agent Gary Hennip called the day a success with something for everyone.

"This went pretty well," Hennip said. 'We had over 64 exhibitor tables and have more people here than in the past. We seem to be getting bigger and bigger."

The Bobcat System Advantage

Many contractors choose a 14' (dig depth) TLB because the reach and loading height of this size TLB minimizes the amount of repositioning required on many jobs – increasing efficiency. The 331/334 are very competitive in these area

If digging power and lifting capacity are needed, the 337/341 match up well in these area and exceed a TLB in reach and loading height.

Wayne County Farmer Sees Volunteering As Crucial Part Of His Dairy Operation

Technically Dix hasn't received the award in person yet, since he was unable to attend last week's meeting due to a scheduling conflict. He expects to have it presented to him during the Wayne County DHIA banquet this fall. The award is a wristwatch that commemorates the time that Dix donates to farm organizations such as the DHIA.

Dix and his wife Daisy milk 50 cows on Ellday Farms just outside of Pleasant Mountain.

Rotationally grazing the herd, Dix maintains a rolling herd average of 18,491 pounds milk, 672 pounds fat, and 604 pounds protein. They own 271 acres, with 35 for intensive grazing and 50 in meadow land. The rest is mostly wooded land.

Dix was one of the first farmers in Wayne County to switch to rotational grazing. Since then, he has hosted several educational meetings on his farm to help other farmers learn more about grazing.

According to Dix, he is still one of only a few who rotationally graze in the county. But more switch to it every year.

"Grazing does take time, and it's not right for every farmer," said Dix. "But a lot of the land in Wayne County is unsuitable for other cropping, and it's cheaper to take the cows to the grass than it is to take the grass to the cows."

Dix dispels the myth that grazing is less labor intensive than other types of dairying. The cows on his farm are switched twice a day and on pasture 24 hours a day during the summer. In the winter, he feeds baleage, dry hay, and a concentrated grain mix.

For Dix, grazing is the most profitable way to dairy farm. "I make more money with cows on pasture than I do when they're in the barn," said Dix. "The cows also last longer. Some last 15 to 16 years."

Dix even had one cow who stayed in the herd until she was 21 years old. That cow held Wayne County's lifetime production record at 273,160 pounds for quite a few years. Since then, the record has been broken twice, this year by a cow from another herd producing more than 300,000 pounds of milk.

The 21-year-old cow was classified as very good. She produced one excellent cow and three other offspring that all stood as grand champions of the Wayne County Fair.

Dix has four excellent cows in his 50-cow herd right now. His B.A.A. is 103.6.

The Dixs have four children who showed animals in 4-H while they were growing up. For seventeen years, Ellday Farms had dairy cattle at the Wayne County Fair. Now, with his grandchildren starting in 4-H, dairy animals from Dix's farm are appearing at the Fair again.

Several years ago, Dix and his family were featured in the Pennsylvania Holstein Profiles because of their quality Holsteins. The family and some of their best animals appeared on the front cover of that magazine. Along with the Holsteins, Dix also has a few Brown Swiss that his grandchildren show.

Dix's children are Darlene, Charles, Karen, and Roger. Roger, a milk truck driver for Dairy Farmers of America, helps out on the farm when he can. Working for an environmental company in southern Pennsylvania, Charles also comes home on the weekends to help. But Ellis and Daisy handle most of the work on the farm.

Karen is a registered nurse, while Darlene and her husband live in New Jersey where he serves in the Navy.

Wearing a suit and tie is something Dix does often because of the many organizations for which he volunteers. Volunteering for these organizations, according to Dix, is the way to make them work.

The Dixs have five grand children. Darlene and her husband, Paul Hoffman, have a son named Jacob. Roger and his wife, Kathryn, have two children, Ashley and Adam. Karen and her husband, Don Jonas, also have two children, Will and Kayla.

Dix attributes his passion for getting involved to what he learned while enrolled in vocational agriculture classes and as a 4-H member growing up on the farm. He is the fifth generation of Dixs to farm in Wayne County. All five generations farmed on separate farms.

Dix and his wife purchased the farm where they live in 1961. Now at 63 years old, he plans to keep farming for some time.

"My grandfather said he would farm until he was 90 years old, and he did," said Dix.

Over the years, Dix has been involved and held offices in many organizations, including the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, Wayne County Extension Board, Wayne County Fair Board, Wayne County Ag Preservation Board, and as a 4-H leader. He currently serves as local chairman for the Wayne County DHIA.

"One of the things I work hard at as the local chairman is to always have a full delegation from Wayne County attend the DHIA district meetings," said Dix. "I usually get on the phone and call other farmers to make sure they'll be there."

Getting full representation from all the counties to attend local district meetings is something that the DHIA struggles to do. Wayne County always has three farmers at the meetings to participate in the voting procedure.

Honored as a 1989 Master Farmer, Dix not only volunteers to serve on the boards of these agriculture organizations, he also encourages other farmers to get involved.

He served as a past director of both the state and county Holstein Association before stepping down to let younger farmers take over the leadership role. He also passed down his duties as a 4-H leader to both his son Charles and daughter-in-law Kathryn.

Dix is very active in his church, the Pleasant Mountain United Methodist Church. He serves as chairman for the administration committee and has been certified as a lay speaker for the United Methodist Church.

Dix greatly appreciates the many people who were involved in nominating him for the Clyde Robison Award, from his county agent Edward Pruss who nominated him to the state DHIA Board of Directors who honored him at last week's meeting.

Dix has been a member of Pennsylvania DHIA for many years. He uses it as a management tool to monitor his herd's production and make management decisions.

"It's an excellent tool to see how profitable individual cows are," said Dix. "Farmers who don't use DHIA are just guessing."

Dix handles overall herd management on Ellday Farms, while his wife takes care of feeding the calves and managing calf care.

According to Dix, farming is something that you have to enjoy doing, especially with the current depressed milk price.

Not only does Dix enjoy farming, he also enjoys getting involved and taking advantage of the leadership opportunities that farming offers. The agriculture industry has benefited tremendously from this enjoyment.

Tour Pa.'s Professional Horse Farms Open House

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.)–A dozen professional stables in the southeastern quadrant of Pennsylvania will open their doors to the public for the seventh annual Pennsylvania Horse Farms Open House Saturday and Sunday, April 8-9.

The Open House is a chance for both active and would-be equestrians to visit a variety of Pennsylvania's professional horse farms, to learn about various breeds and styles of riding, about raising, caring for and training horses, and to explore the many opportunities for getting involved with horses right in their own backyards.

The event, produced by Pennsylvania Equestrian and sponsored by Cargill Nutrena Feeds, is free and self-guided, and individuals travel from stable to stable in their own vehicles. The farms are open to visitors from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Saturday and noon-4 p.m. Sunday.

Again this year a number of stables will invite visitors to take a sample riding lesson, trail ride, or pony ride.

In addition to riding a horse, visitors to the open house can visit a petting zoo, audit a dressage clinic conducted by a nationally-known trainer and author, and watch a quadrille (four riders performing in unison). Demonstrations of the latest horseshoeing and round pen training techniques will be conducted, along with sessions on saddle fitting, genetics, showmanship, natural horsemanship, and foal imprinting.

Visitors can take a break from the horses and enjoy bagpipe music, a Native American dance troupe, and dog obedience and clicker training demonstrations. Nearly every farm will offer refreshments, and a number will have vendors onsite for visitors who want to do a little shopping.

Many stables will have young foals to enjoy. Visitors will be

ADADC Kicks Off

SYRACUSE, NY–With millennium hype reaching maximum density, American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc., (ADADC) took the opportunity to remind consumers of one fact that remains true in any century–the importance of milk in a growing child's diet

"Nutrition for the Next Millennium" is the newest in a series of colorful school posters ADADC has produced for school cafeterias. It features a family looking to the moonlight sky and noticing how much the Big Dipper constellation looks like a carton of milk. More than 11,000 posters were distributed to schools, K-12, throughout the marketing area.

School posters are just one of the ways ADADC works with school food service directors to improve milk's image as well as it's quality and variety. This fall, the largest school districts in ADADC's marketing area–including New York City, Long Island, Yonkers, Newark, Jersey City, Syracuse City, Rochester, Buffalo, and Greece–received special "got milk?" menu marketing kits, consisting of a "got milk?" menu board with erasable markers, "Cold Milk Served Here" inflatable cow, milk temperature charts, and a "got were two stabilized stream crossings and a spring development.

Bracken's concern about the damage beef cattle were causing to feeding areas during the winter led to his developing a feeding area stabilized with stone. A water diversion was installed above this feeding area to channel runoff around the site. A buffer area was established between the feeding area and a stream. Limited grazing buffer areas were established along both sides of the entire length of the stream in the pasture.

Bracken had a nutrient management plan developed for this grazing system and submitted the plan for approval under the Nutrient Management Act. He hosted a tour of his farm and the grazing system for Project Grass.

Hall noted, "Bracken's efforts in teaching others about conservation by example and implementing the many conservation practices on his farm makes him deserving of the PFGC's Conservation farmer Award."

Outstanding Pasture Producer awards:

• Don Bothell, Indiana County, has worked with the Indiana County Conservation District and the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service to establish a rotational grazing system for dairy heifers and beef feeders. In the pasture system, 41 acres are included, and additional cropland is used for grazing in the fall after crops are harvested. High-tensile perimeter fence (9,590 feet) and 8,900 feet of interior fence have been installed in the system. Two stabilized stream crossings have been installed to allow animals access to drinking water and pasture areas. Stream bank buffers have been established with the installation of stream bank fencing.

Bothell has worked with the Indiana County Conservation District to conduct a pasture management field day at his farm. This field day allowed others to see how the system worked and to ask Bothell about pasture management.

Bothell also allowed the conservation district to conduct an agricultural conservation practice tour for legislators at his farm. He participated by leading the group on the tour and explaining his pasture system operation.

• Glenn and Robin Gorrell, Bradford County, milk 185 Holsteins on 195 acres of pasture near Milan. They strive to provide all roughages from the pasture during the grazing season by timely use of nitrogen and reseeding of pastures. Glenn was the initiating force behind the Bradford County Grazing Network and continues to facilitate the 11 or so meetings they hold during the grazing season. He has served as a speaker at several local, regional, and statewide grazing/forage-related events.

More information from the conference is scheduled in the next issue of Foraging Around, a newsletter set to appear in Lancaster Farming April 22.

PA DHIA President's Speech

nars with farmers explaining American-style dairy herd management and the concept of farmer owned and controlled cooperatives. I mentioned earlier our new management software–Barn Owl–is the best in the world. There is a market in Eastern Europe as well as other areas of the world waiting to be filled by this product. Both the data processing and the on farm software sales are possibilities. I will leave it to Dave to explain more details.

I'd like to turn my attention to a related issue. Last month the Board of PA DHIA and Dairy One agreed to create a for profit service company focused on dairy herd management on an international scale. This global venture is called AgStar Technologies and will be owned 50/50 by the two organizations. There remains a lot of details still to be worked out, but it should be up and running in early Spring.

There are four directors from each organization, which form the new board for AgStar Technologies. The AgStar Directors from Pennsylvania, along with myself, are Bill Itle, Dale Hoover, and Adam Derr. I personally am very excited about not only the formation of AgStar which holds great potential, but also about the prospect of working in this business more closely with Dairy One. I see a relationship developing where a sharing of resources would greatly benefit dairymen–members of both organizations, hopefully in all facts of the business. The AgStar creation brings together the foresight and energies of our General Manager, the size and scope of Dairy One, the marketing power of Dairylea through their involvement with Dairy One and the vision of CEO, Rick Smith, along with the absolute creative genius of our DRPC programming department. AgStar, I believe, is excitement waiting to happen. And yet having expressed all my excitement about the international possibilities, it still may well be that long term, the greatest success of this organizational cooperation will be right here at home.

For milk production per cow in 1999, Washington had the highest at 22,409 pounds and Louisiana had the lowest at 11,656 pounds.

A summary of the January pool data for the new federal orders is in Table 3 below. The Upper Midwest and the Northeast orders were the largest in terms of volume. The Florida and Appalachian orders had the highest percent Class I utilization rates. These two orders also had the highest uniform prices. It should be noted that the uniform prices do not reflect any over-order premiums or hauling credits, which can be substantial in specific orders.

USDA also announced the March 2000 Class I and II price information. The Base Class I price for March 2000 will be $10.84 per cwt. It is to this price one adds the Class I differential to come up with the Class I price. The advanced Class IV skim milk pricing factor is $7.71 per cwt and the advanced butterfat pricing factor is $0.9713 per pound. The Class II skim milk price for March 2000 will be $8.41 per cwt. The two-week NASS survey prices from February that were used in these calculations were: butter $0.9105, nonfat dry milk $1.0104, cheese $1.1084, and dry whey $0.1800.

Wenger: Tobacco Money Going To Growers

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.)–Tobacco farmers waiting for payments from the National Tobacco Growers Trust should expect the checks to arrive in under three weeks, according to state Sen. Noah Wenger (R-36), who said the distribution process is under way after several delays.

"The paperwork is done and the checks should go out in two weeks or less," Wenger said, explaining that $1.6 million is available to the 319 eligible tobacco producers throughout Pennsylvania. He added that most tobacco growers are located in Lancaster County.

The trust was created as part of the larger federal tobacco settlement, reached between the nation's four cigarette-tobacco companies and 46 states, including Pennsylvania.

"The trust is designed to provide financial assistance to growers who may be negatively impacted by the federal settlement," Wenger said. "It's a much-needed boost for local farmers who relied upon their tobacco crops as a means of supporting their families."

Farmers who grew cigarette tobacco (Maryland Type 32) in 1998 were eligible, provided they submitted applications for the 1999 payment before the deadline. According to the state Department of Agriculture, 451 growers applied for the funding in 1999.

Applications Needed for PA's Performance Testing

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)–The PA Department of Agriculture's Meat Animal Evaluation Center is accepting applications for PA's Performance Testing programs for Rams and Boars.

There are a few pens still available for the Boar Testing Program. The nomination period continues for a couple more weeks for the Ram Performance Testing program. The Center will accept both fall born ram lambs born between September 1, 1999 and December 31, 1999, and spring born ram lambs born in January and February of 2000.

The rams nominated will be delivered April 11, 2000. They will then be given a 7-day adjustment period. April 18, 2000, the rams will be weighed on test. The rams will be weighed every 14 days and progress reports will be sent out to owners and requesting, interested parties. The 84 day test will conclude July 11th and the rams will have their average daily gain, lifetime weight per day of age and respective ratios calculated.

The rams will be shorn, scanned ultrasonically to determine fat-thickness and loin-eye area and undergo breed character and structural evaluations. The rams will have a breeding soundness exam which will include a comprehensive semen evaluation on the fall-born rams.

After all of the objective evaluations, approximately 75% of the rams are selected to be offered in PA's Performance Tested Ram Scale. This year is Pennsylvania's 22nd Annual Performance Tested Ram Sale is scheduled for Saturday, August 5, 2000. The ram sale will be held in conjunction with an invitational ewe sale and the PA Sheep Producers Field Day at P.S.U.'s Ag Arena.

PA's 25th Performance tested Boar Sale is slated for Wednesday evening, August 16, 2000. This is scheduled to coincide with Penn State's Ag Progress Days.

A pen of three boars, from one sire and from one or two litters are delivered weighing between 40 lbs. and 65 lbs. The pigs are given a 7-14 day adjustment period, then weighed on test. While on test, the boars are weighed every 14 days until the pen's average weight is 240 lbs. The pen's feed efficiency will be calculated and the boars will be scanned ultrasonically to determine fat thickness and loin-eye area. The boars must meet minimum requirements for structural correctness and soundness of movement, in addition to breeding soundness.

For more information on PA's Performance testing programs or to nominate rams or boars, please contact, Glenn Eberly, Director, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Meat Animal Evaluation Center, 651 Fox Hollow Rd., State College, PA 16803, phone 814-238-2527 or 814-865-5857.

able to view horses offered for sale and stallions available for breeding. One farm will even invite visitors to line dance with their Paint stallion.

Breeds of horses range from popular thoroughbreds, paints, and quarter horses to the more unusual American Miniature horses, Clydesdales, Percherons, and European warmbloods.

A number of stables will give visitors the opportunity to "throw a leg over" a horse or pony. Mile View Farm in Bucks County, Lauxmont Farm in York County, and Heron Mead Farm in Berks County will offer pony rides for kids both days.

Foxfield Farm in Reinholds, Lancaster County, will have free pony rides and free introductory mini riding lessons, both available on a first-come, first-served basis. BarKay Stables in Manheim will offer 15-minute mini riding lessons, with reservations taken in advance, for $10. Windy Ridge Acres in Newport, Perry County, will offer half hour trail rides for $10 and $2 pony rides.

With more than 174,000 horses, Pennsylvania ranks fifth in the nation in generation of income from the horse industry, and Pennsylvanians spend nearly two-thirds of a billion dollars a year on their horses. Most of that industry is clustered in the southeastern quadrant of the state, where the open house is centered.

Complete information on the farms, including maps and directions, will be featured in the March/April issue of Pennsylvania Equestrian, a bimonthly newspaper for and about Pennsylvania's horse industry, and on the world wide web at www.horseshow.com.

The Open House is free. For more information, call (717) 898-5874.

Lanco Dairy Cooperative Hosts Meeting About Proposed Pricing System

JAYNE SEBRIGHT
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — On Monday, Lanco Dairy Cooperative hosted a meeting in Lancaster to rally support for a new milk pricing system it claims will benefit smaller farmer.

About 25 people attended the meeting, where board members from Lanco Cooperative reviewed a new plan they are proposing to replace the newly-adapted federal milk pricing system.

Area legislators and industry representatives, along with local farmers, attended the meeting to discuss the advantages and challenges of the plan.

Called "Option USA," the proposed plan uses a 36-member committee with three from each of the 11 federal orders plus California to determine the milk price.

"The committee would meet quarterly to collect USDA data on consumption, exports, imports, and production cost, then use that information to determine the farmer's milk price for the next three months," said Ken Marshall, president of Lanco Cooperative and a 75-cow dairy farmer in northern Maryland.

According to Marshall, the plan would eliminate surplus by using farmer-generated funds to subsidies exports to poorer countries. The plan also calls for the farmer's milk check to be priced on a sliding scale, paying more for the first 100,000 pounds of milk a farmer ships and decreasing the price per hundredweight for each additional 100,000 pounds of milk produced.

Lanco Dairy Cooperative is a new cooperative that began in 1998 with 32 members and has grown to an expected 400 members by the end of April. The cooperative is made up of mostly Amish farmers in Lancaster and Chester Counties with herds averaging around 50 cows.

The cooperative is backboned by Allied Federated Cooperative in Canton, N.Y. According to Marshall, Allied is a non-profit cooperative with 35 other cooperatives under them.

A volunteer Board of Directors representing Lanco Cooperative operate the cooperative from the dairy farmer's standpoint, while Allied is hired to market Lanco's milk and return the highest price possible to the dairy farmer.

Critics of "Option USA" claim it discriminates against the large farmer and creates legal challenges due to the Free Trade Agreement. While "Option USA" has officially received little support from other dairy cooperatives and farm industry organizations, Lanco Cooperative is optimistic.

"It's not Lanco's plan -- we're just carrying the ball," said Marshall. "A lot of other farmers are supporting the plan. Area legislators have also agreed to support the plan if they see enough dairy farmers truly supporting the measure."

According to Marshall, the Sierra Club is supporting this plan to aid small farmers. For more information about the "Option USA" plan, contact Ken Marshall at (410) 658-7532.

Pennsylvania Cattle Herds Get Help To Control Johne's Disease

JAYNE SEBRIGHT
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A national study conducted several years ago indicated that at least 20 percent of all dairy herd owners have some degree of Johne's disease in their herd.

This chronic disease can mean big economic losses to the farmer through lost milk production and forced cullings. Although the study indicated that a lower percentage of beef herds are affected with the disease, it is still prevalent in some herds.

That's why the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA), in cooperation with the Pennsylvania State University and the University of Pennsylvania College of Veterinary Medicine, have worked with producer and ag industry representatives to develop a new Johne's program.

This program is a composite of three separate but mutually supportive programs that help farmers identify Johne's in their herd, manage any problems, and receive certification for a Johne's free herd.

The first program is the "30 Free" Test Program. This is ideal for herd owners that have no idea whether or not they have Johne's in their herd. PDA will provide ELISA tests of 30 animals in the herd at no lab fee. The farmer has to pay for the veterinarian to take the blood sample and ship the samples, but the laboratory fees are covered by PDA.

"The "30 Free" Program is a good way for farmers to find out in a non-threatening way whether their herd has a Johne's problem," said Dr. Larry Hutchinson, extension veterinarian for Penn State.

"The advantage to the state is that we can find out how serious this problem is in Pennsylvania — is it in all of the herds or how many of the herds."

The "30 Free" Program is a preliminary indicator of Johne's in a herd. If all 30 blood tests come back negative, the herd owner can make the conclusion that Johne's is not that prevalent in the herd. If many of the tests come back positive, then it is likely that Johne's is widespread in the herd.

"The reason the number 30 was selected was because the National Johne's Working Group (representing several universities and regulatory organizations across the country) identified 30 as a statistically significant number that indicates a herd's status with a high degree of accuracy," said Hutchinson. "That's only when the 30 animals are selected randomly from the herd."

In Pennsylvania, the herd owners are not required to randomly pick their animals. So the accuracy of the test depends on the randomness of the herd sample selection.

The "30 Free" Program is available to all beef and dairy herds in Pennsylvania. If a farmer wants to have the tests completed, they should contact their local veterinarian to begin the process.

Participating in the "30 Free" Test Program does not obligate the farmer to do anything to control Johne's in their herd. However, it is strongly encouraged.

"Since the farmer does have to pay to have the blood tests taken, they may want to combine the Johne's blood tests with other tests, such as testing for brucellosis," said Huntchinson.

Once the herd's status is identified through the "30 Free" Program, that status helps guide the herd into the other two programs that PDA offers.

If a herd's results come back all negative (with no indications of Johne's disease in the samples), that herd can register for the "Voluntary Johne's Disease Status Program."

"The Voluntary Status Program provides a means of recognizing herds that are Johne's free through different levels of testing," said Hutchinson.

The program attempts to move herds from level one certification, which includes herds with the lowest degree of certainty in being Johne's free, to level four certification, which includes herds that have the highest degree of certainty.

Help To Control Johne's Disease

If the herd owner receives all negative test results on the 30 free ELISA tests, then they may already qualify for level one certification.

"Herd owners can choose to move up the ladder by doing additional testing," said Hutchinson. "Or they can stay at level one year after year by testing 30 animals randomly each year."

According to Hutchinson, some commercial herds are choosing to pursue only level one certification. "It is a very cheap and low effort way to assure others that your herd does not have a widespread Johne's problem."

Herds that are selling breeding stock will want to go on to level two, three, and four. "Level one does not provide the high degree of confidence that those who market breeding stock need," said Hutchinson.

It takes a herd about four years to receive level four certification using an approved sequence of annual blood tests or manure culture tests. All mature cows in the herd must be have both blood tests and fecal samples taken a minimal of four consecutive times.

"This gives anyone buying animals the added assurance that the herd is Johne's free," said Hutchinson.

The third program that PDA offers is the "Johne's Disease Management Program." This program is for herds that have positive results from the "30 Free" tests taken on the herd.

"These herds need to identify how much Johne's they have in their herd and how they are going to manage it," said Hutchinson. "This involves some testing and some management changes."

The first step in the Johne's Disease Management Program is to sign a cooperative agreement. The agreement is signed by the herd owner, herd veterinarian, and PDA to identify what the herd is going to do to control and hopefully eradicate the Johne's problem.

In the agreement, each party agrees to their responsibilities in correcting the problem. PDA agrees to do certain testing and alleviate some of the fees. The veterinarian agrees to do fecal samples and blood tests to monitor the problem. And the herd owner agrees to make necessary changes to control the problem.

These management changes may include the handling of calves that are very susceptible to the diseases, building new facilities, improving sanitation practices, and separating the different age groups so that young calves are not housed with adult animals.

"The Johne's Disease Management Program is very flexible," said Hutchinson. "Not every herd is going to want to manage the disease as intensively as others do. Also, not all herds will have the same level of disease in their herd."

Once the agreement is signed, the next step is fulfilling the responsibilities outlined in the agreement. The herd owner and veterinarian, along with PDA, must work closely together to control and manage Johne's in the herd.

Herds that participated in either the Johne's Disease Management Program or the Voluntary Johne's Disease Status Program can receive the "30 Free" tests the following year.

According to Hutchinson, educational programs on Johne's have been sponsored at several county meetings over the past few months. However, the best thing that farmers can do to enroll in the program and begin Johne's prevention in their herd is to start by contacting their local veterinarian.

Dairy Farmers Seek Increase In Over-Order Premium

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — With rising diesel fuel prices and milk prices at a 20-year low, dairy farmer groups are seeking a temporary increase of 25 cents per hundredweight to the over-order premium paid to farmers.

The Pennsylvania State Grange and the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau are both calling for this increase to aid farmers in light of the financial hardships that hit dairy farmers particularly hard in the early part of this year.

The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board held a hearing on Thursday to consider whether to temporarily boost wholesale and/or the premium for milk to account for these higher fuel costs.

In a letter submitted as part of the Grange's request for an emergency hearing, the Grange's Legistlative Director Brenda Shambaugh said "A number of our members have stated that their fuel costs nearly doubled in recent months. That means that the depressed milk check is even less able to meet the cost of production."

"These are truly desperate times for dairy farmers," said Harold Curtis, who is Chairman of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau's dairy committee and milks 300 cows in Warren County.

According to Curtis, the average cost of production last year was $13.33 per hundredweight. However, producer payments are expected to average between $11.50 and $12.00 per hundredweight for the month of January.

At $12.00 per hundredweight, a 25-cent increase to $1.45 in the over-order premium would bring the farmer's Class I milk price up to $1.45, enough to cover production cost.

"Commodity prices are the lowest that they have been in 20 years, and costs are not only rising, but escalating dramatically," said Stambaugh. "Dairy farmers do not have the ability to recoup these additional costs."

USDA Proposes To Implement Forward Contracting

WASHINGTON (USDA) — Under a new pilot program mandated by Congress, dairy farmers marketing their milk under Federal milk marketing orders (FMMO) will be able to enter into forward pricing contracts with proprietary handlers who purchase their milk.

Forward contracting is voluntary for both dairy farmers and milk handlers. All other Federal milk order regulations are unchanged. The pilot program expires after Dec. 31, 2004.

As provided in the legislation, the pilot program will only apply to federally regulated milk used for manufactured dairy products. Fluid milk (Class I) is not eligible for forward contracting under the pilot program.

Under the proposed rule for the pilot program, a handler will be able to enter into forward contracts with dairy farmers and cooperative associations for any milk receipts that do not exceed the handler's manufacturing uses of milk for the month.

Manufacturing uses include milk used for cream products, yogurt, dry milk, butter, and all types of cheeses. For the volume of milk covered by forward contracts, a handler is exempt from paying minimum Federal order price(s) to producers and cooperative associations. Instead, prices as agreed to in the forward contract will be paid.

Handlers participating in the pilot program are still subject to all other provisions of an order and must still keep records and submit reports now required under the FMMO program.

Handlers must make available to the market administrator such records as are determined necessary to verify and establish the handler's obligations under the order. Handlers also will be required to submit to the market administrator a copy of the forward contract with each producer or cooperative, as well as a disclosure statement signed by the producer or cooperative association.

A signed disclosure statement verifies that a producer received a USDA Fact Sheet that describes the nature of the pilot program and risks involved. The Fact Sheet also provides useful guidelines and tips that producers should consider in deciding whether to enter into a forward contract.

The Fact Sheet is available from any market administrator, or can be downloaded from AMS' web site, at: www.ams.usda.gov/dairy. Questions and answers related to the pilot program also are available on the web site, or from market administrator offices (listed below).

The proposed rule also will require that every forward contract under the pilot program contain a clause that gives the producer the opportunity to change his or her mind within three days of signing the contract. Forward contracts that do not contain this 3-day right to rescind clause will not be considered valid contracts for purposes of this pilot program.

The proposed rule also will require that first-time contracts not be written for more than six months, and that no contract may extend beyond Dec. 31, 2004. These provisions are intended to help producers become familiar with a new method for pricing their milk and managing risk.

The proposed rule for the pilot program will be published in the March 1, 2000 Federal Register.

Comments should be submitted no later than March 16. Comments should be submitted to Nicholas Memoli, Order Formulation Branch, Dairy Programs, USDA/AMS, Rm 2971 South Building, P.O. Box 96456, Washington DC 20090-6456. Comments may also be sent by fax to (202) 690-0552 or by e-mail to nicholas.memoli@usda.gov.

Farmers Get Advice On Surviving And Thriving At Dairy Days

JAYNE SEBRIGHT
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — According to Brad Hilty, owner and chief consultant of PLS Agri-Management Associates in Carlisle, operating a successful dairy business can be challenging in today's agribusiness environment.

Hilty presented two sessions during the first Lancaster County Dairy Days, held several weeks ago. In his first presentation, he identified ten management strategies that farmers can employ to "survive and thrive" in today's volatile dairy industry.

Hilty's first recommendation for dairy farmers who want to maintain a profitable business is to develop a strategic business plan.

"I don't know too many farmers who would build a barn without first having blueprints," said Hilty. "Yet many farmers don't have a written plan for their dairy operation."

Hilty recommended writing a mission statement. The farmer can evaluate his operation based on the framework established in the mission statement.

The farmer's plan should answer the following questions: Where are you and your business at now? Where do you want to be? What are your goals and objectives? How will you achieve them?

"Writing a business plan can be time consuming," said Hilty. He recommended enlisting the help of professionals.

Hilty's second recommendation was to control the controllables. "Focusing on the uncontrollables will drain you of your energy," said Hilty.

Milk production, milk pricing components, milk quality, and risk management were all listed under the controllables, according to Hilty.

"Risk management is a key management practice that you have to brush up on," said Hilty. "It is going to be a key component in a successful dairy operation down the road."

Hilty warned against locking in milk prices without knowing your cost of production. "You don't want to lock in your milk price at $14 when it cost you $14.50 to produce the milk," said Hilty. "You have to know how to use the risk management tools."

The third recommendation was to maximize forage quality and feed a balanced ration. "Harvest, store, and feed high quality forages," said Hilty. "And make sure you test your forages."

According to Hilty, poor quality forages cost one farmer who milk 100 cows nearly $100,000 in lost production and higher grain costs when he didn't manage his forages properly.

"You need to feed a consistent, high quality forage basis," said Hilty. "If you need alternative storages, such as an ag bag, use one."

Hilty's fourth recommendation emphasized cow comfort. "You need to evaluate your facilities for cow comfort," said Hilty. "Cow comfort improves production and reduces cull rates. Your longevity increases, which reduces one of the highest costs you have — heifer replacements."

The fifth recommendation was to know your cost of production. "You need a good accounting system and good production records, both on the dairy and the cropping enterprises," said Hilty.

Hilty encouraged farmers to manage their information systems so that they could spot their strengths and weaknesses.

"If you know your cost of production and production records, you can compare them to benchmarks," said Hilty.

Hilty recommended that farmers compare their production records to benchmarks from the top ten percent of dairies in the country.

"Don't strive to be just average because average isn't going to cut it in ten years," said Hilty.

The sixth recommendation was to implement a management team and use key advisors as a sounding board for farm decisions. This "sounding board" can help develop key strategies for improving profitability.

"There are a lot of people demanding your time," said Hilty. "Why not demand some of their time back?"

Making wise investments was Hilty's seventh recommendation. "You should examine each

Horse Club Conducts Recognition Banquet

•Horseless Member of the Year for the County: Kelsey Lenox–Boots and Saddles.

•Boots and Saddles County, District and State High Point Awards: Alisha Liles–junior, and Jennifer Goodman–senior.

•Boots and Saddles POA Essay Contest: This year the Boots and Saddles 4-H Club had the honor of having a former Club member Wanda Steckley of Windy Rock Farm, Columbia, donate a 3-year-old POA to the Club for a member to win. Wanda wanted to give back to the club that had given her so much as a youth. The club held an essay contest for members to win the POA. The winner chosen was 9-year-old horseless member Kelsey Lenox, Lancaster. 1999 was Kelsey's first year in 4-H. However, she has had the love a horses for many years. The community was very generous in helping to put together a get started package for the first time horse owner. The following business generously donated horse items: StateLine Tack Shop, Lancaster; Equestrian International, New Holland; H & H Tack Shop, Annville; and Central Tractor, Lancaster.

"Kelsey has been given a great opportunity by a Wanda (former member) to get the same wonderful life experiences out of 4-H as she did," said Becky Miller, organizational leader, Boots and Saddles.

Now Is The Time

Each crop has its own list of insects and diseases. Find out the best stage to harvest and how to handle it after harvest to maintain its quality.

5. Spread out your plantings.
6. Focus on quality. In milk, beef, pork, corn and tobacco, you can succeed by producing the most. In vegetable production you have to focus on producing the best.
7. Throw out the junk. Nobody wants wormy corn or cat faced tomatoes. Can it. Eat it. Leave it in the field.
8. Learn the spray program. And
9. Find an expert farmer and visit him often.

Feather Prof.'s Footnote: "Far away there in the sunshine are my highest aspirations. I may not reach them, but I can look up and see their beauty, believe in them and try to follow where they lead."

Hoof Clinic Held At University Park

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.)–Ask some people to list the most important parts of a dairy cow and very few would even think of the hooves. But to the 375 people who attended the Pennsylvania Foot Clinic at Penn State's Ag Arena on Friday, February 4, good hoof health is very important.

Dairy producers, veterinarians, nutritionists, researchers, agribusiness representatives, and other consultants came to hear dairy industry specialists speak of the various issues that affect hoof health. Nearly 60 hoof trimmers, from as far away as Ontario, Canada, came also to watch hoof trimming demonstrations on dairy cows with various foot problems.

Professional hoof trimmer Paul Neer, Belleville, hosted and coordinated the event along with sponsors from Agway, Monsanto Dairy Business, Roche Vitamins, and Zinpro Corporation. Neer sponsored a similar appreciation clinic two years ago in Belleville. Nearly 250 dairy producers, veterinarians, hoof trimmers, and nutritionists attended that event.

"There are a lot of theories about chutes, chipper tools, and the best combinations," Neer said as he welcomed the crowd, "but I say it [the quality of the hoof trim] is only as good as the guy behind it." Neer, a firm believer in hoof maintenance, then introduced Penn State Extension Agent Dan McFarland who talked about the importance of proper housing and environment for cow comfort.

"Make sure whoever lays your concrete is your best friend," McFarland said as he went on to compare bare ground and solid concrete qualities, the various concrete surfaces, and the use of sand, grit, and rubber in alleys. He said other factors that influence hoof health include frequency of manure removal, design of rest areas, ventilation, feeding ration, access to outside, and overcrowding.

Executive Director of the Hoof Trimmers Association, Nichelle Martin, from Wisconsin, introduced Dr. Jan Shearer from the University of Florida College of Veterinary Medicine. Shearer spoke about cow anatomy, physiology, biomechanics, and the importance of hoof trimming.

"Ninety percent of lameness is in the foot. Ninety percent of that in the foot involves the rear feet. Seventy to ninety percent of that involves the outside claw," Shearer explained. He went on to say that cow comfort is critical to the whole issue of hoof health.

Hoof trimmer Dale Herr of Lancaster demonstrates maintenance trimming.

The morning session ended with hoof trimming demonstrations. Participants moved throughout the Ag Arena to watch ten hoof trimmers demonstrate maintenance and problem hoof trimming.

In the afternoon, Dr. William Seymour, a nutritionist with Roche Vitamins, spoke about biotin and hoof health while Dr. Chris Canale, a nutritionist with Agway, spoke about laminitis and nutrition.

Holstein Associations Honors Progressive Breeders and Genetic Herd

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — The Pennsylvania Holstein Association honored members and special guests during its annual awards breakfast held two weeks ago.

During the breakfast, the association also recognized membership solicitors.

James Houser from Centre County was recognized as the individual who has done the most outstanding work in membership solicitation. Lehigh and McKean County clubs were also recognized for reaching their 2000 membership goals. Both clubs received a $200 cash award for their efforts.

Sixty-seven members were honored with the prestigious Progressive Breeder Registry Award. The requirements for this award are that the herd owner must be a member of both the national and state association and be enrolled in the Deluxe or Premium TriStar service options and herd classification programs.

The award is given to approximately 10 percent of the herds enrolled in the Deluze or Premier TriStar service options. Keyston Farms from Easton received the award for the 42nd time this year, while 11 breeders were first time winners of the award.

Sixty-seven members recognized for receiving the Progressive Genetics Herd Award. The award is awarded to the top 500 herds with the highest average TPI of all females in the herd, both young and mature. Herd owners must be members of both the national and state associations. They also must be enrolled in the Deluxe or Premier TriStar service options and herd classification programs.

The association presented special awards to farm editors who have supported the club over the years. Robert Rumler, who recently retired from Holstein USA, Inc., was also recognized during the breakfast meeting.

Holstein Association Hosts a Traditional "Afternoon Tea"

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.)–The ladies of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association experienced a tradition boasting with history at The Carlisle House on Friday during the annual convention. The tradition experienced by the Ladies and Guests dates back to times prior to the 1650s–THE AFTERNOON TEA.

In keeping with this timeless tradition, "The Red Rose with Chocolates," a Victorian afternoon tea was held. Linda Ewing of the Carlisle House, along with event chairperson, Patti Hushon of Airville, York County, began the task of preparing for this event. Upon arrival at the "Afternoon Tea," each lady was given a red rose and a special bar of chocolate. The afternoon tea began with the serving of tea and tea scones. Next would be the sandwiches, and finally the refreshing of the tea along with the cakes and special delights.

In the tradition of wearing the long tea gowns and special fashions, the Gatsby Boutique, along with owners Rhonda Flickinger and Brianna Sollers gave a Fashion Revue of the clothing found in their shoppe in downtown Hanover. The Gatsby Boutique offers a unique line of handmade ladies' clothing.

To add to the pleasure of the afternoon, the Pennsylvania Dairy Princesses were the models for the event. The State Dairy Princess Lori Connelly and her court, Amanda Gilkinson and Becky Kilgore, presented the unique line of clothing for the ladies' pleasure. Outfits from all lines of clothing offered at the Gatsby Boutique were modeled, and the fashion show concluded with a formal gown showing by Lori. The ladies enjoyed the beautiful fashions and the company of the state dairy princesses.

With the help of sponsors, seven Victorian Gift Boxes filled with lovely items including of course, varieties of tea were awarded as door prizes. The Pennsylvania Holstein Association would like to thank all sponsors and everyone that made this afternoon such a tremendous experience.

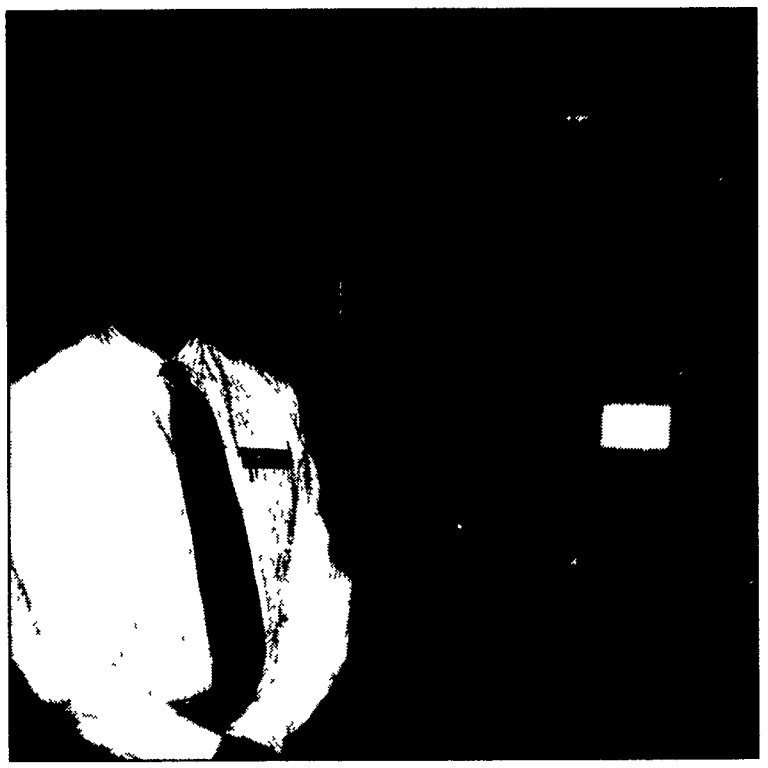
The Red Rose with Chocolate's sponsors were Royster Clark Chemical Company, Monsanto, Ray's Truck Repair, New Holland Sales, Cornerstone Genetics, H.E. Heindel & Sons, Deer Creek Equipment, Sandy & Frank Feeser, Agri-King, and Muddy Creek Veterinary Services.

Site Index Looks At Potential Phosphorous 'Hot Spots'

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — To put the brakes on potential phosphorous runoff from farmland, efforts may have to focus on the "hot spots" — particular areas on a farm already testing high with phosphorous and prone to pose a threat to watersheds.

That's the message delivered by a research leader with USDA Agriculture Research Service (ARS) last week at the Mid-Atlantic No-Till Conference at the Holiday Inn in Grantville.



At the recent no-till conference in Grantville were, from left, Mark Goodson, agronomy agent, York County, and speaker Dr. Andrew Sharpley, research soil scientist with USDA-ARS.

Dr. Andrew N. Sharpley, research leader with USDA-ARS Pasture Systems and Watershed Management Research Lab, associated with Penn State, spoke to about 111 growers, crop advisers, and other agri-industry representatives at the tillage conference.

Sharpley provided an overview on work with the phosphorous index, a site assessment tool, in work done on several farms in a nearby watershed.

In field maps, site index identification can map potential "hot spots" for phosphorous runoff. The index can tell soil scientists where phosphorous levels are high, where potential runoff can occur, but it doesn't answer the ultimate question: does phosphorous get into the streams?

The site covers four farms in Northumberland County, encompassing about 40 hectares, Sharpley noted.

The FD-36 watershed has swine, poultry, and other types of farms nearby. All research was done on lease agreements, Sharpley said. About 30 percent of the land was in forest and there was some grazing.

Most of the farmland was in row crops, with corn/soybean rotations, and some alfalfa, he noted. The grid sampling began about three years ago, including phosphorous.

Agronomists are aware that corn has virtually no response above 50 parts per million (PPM) of phosphorous. Above 100 ppm, there is no defining crop response.

Of the areas mapped, about 60-70 percent of the cropped area were above sufficient in terms of phosphorous, mostly from applications of swine slurry and poultry manure.

There were streams and creeks on the farmland next to fields with high levels of phosphorous.

What the research concluded was that there are "some areas more at risk than others," Sharpley said.

The national site index work began with the Natural Resource Conservation Service (NRCS) in 1990, at the Southwest Technical Institute in Fort Worth, Texas. For years the group studied phosphorous loss in soils, and concluded that a combination of factors — including modes of transportation of the soil resource and the source of the material — contributed to potential runoff hazards.

Proximity of the hot spots to streams could be the real culprit. Managing those hot spots could provide more efficient at controlling general runoff levels rather than using a standard, whole-farm approach.

"Where we are on the landscape is critical," he said. "Phosphorous has to travel a long way to get to a stream or channel."

Soil texture and permeability are keys. Wet areas in the winter on soil, or applying the material to snow or ice, can contribute to runoff problems. Much of the runoff in the Northeast, he noted, could be blamed on saturated excess of phosphorous in wet areas of land. Though heavy downpours can contribute to runoff, this region experiences that situation rarely if at all.

In the future, USDA-ARS may come up with a way to, using GIS and mapping software, distinctly identify areas of farms where runoff ability is high or low, he noted.

Sharpley noted that 90 percent of the phosphorous from a watershed is generated from 20-25 percent of the land — especially the "hot spots."

Right now, producers can stem the runoff by improving manure incorporation. If the fer-

SIMPLE, VERSATILE, and AFFORDABLE Chore-Time® SUPER-Selector™ PNT Ventilation Control is a user-friendly 12-stage microprocessor control designed to efficiently work with nearly all ventilation methods - natural, negative satic pressure, and tunnel. Easy to operate, this control features two heat and 10 cooling stages. The SUPER-Selector is easy to set up and adjust to fine tune for your building's specific ventilation requirements.

Chore-Time nipple drinkers come assembled and feature Chore-Time's Surge Plus® regulator which automatically boosts pressure during times of peak water consumption.

Chore-Time's new MODEL C2® PLUS Broiler Feeding System gets birds off to a good start, minimizes wasted feed, and provides birds with consistent access to fresh feed. The latest in Chore-Time's 45-year history of outstanding broiler feeding systems, the MODEL C2® PLUS includes a reinforced pan eating area and cone wear surface. This may be Chore-Time's most durable broiler feeder yet.

tilizer is injected below the surface, "that can minimize the phosphorous coming off," said Sharpley.

Producers should focus on incorporate the manure or other phosphorous-rich resource two inches or deeper in the soil. The greatest loss of phosphorous comes from broadcasting it on a surface that is frozen or snow-covered.

Also, areas of the field near a stream, with 8 percent slope or higher, and clay fields with runoff, need special management.

In the future, nutrient management plans could use the site index as a critical measurement. If Pennsylvania adopts a Maryland-type, phosphorous-based system of nutrient management, the site index could be crucial. It may point to changing many procedures, including changing field boundaries or other methods, applying less manure, or other ways of managing the resource.

"Some risk is acceptable and some unavoidable," Sharpley noted, regarding how much phosphorous can be placed into the soil. "We have to decide what risk level we're willing to accept."

investment on its potential return on investment (ROI)," said Hilty.

He suggested prioritizing investments by the payback period. The first investments you should make are the ones that will pay off themselves in one to two years. For major investments, such as an expansion, the payoff period should be seven to eight years.

The next recommendation was to analyze enterprises on farms. "Identify your profit centers," said Hilty. "Examine the profitability of each enterprises and consider alternatives for those enterprises that aren't making a profit."

Hilty's ninth recommendation was emphasizing your strengths.

"Farmers no longer have to be a jack-of-all-trades," said Hilty. He encouraged farmers to do what they enjoy and do it well.

His final recommendation was to manage expenses. "Farmers should manage their expenses to 65 percent of their income," said Hilty. "They should also separate non-productive expenses from productive expenses."

Minimizing the non-productive expenses and focusing on productive expenses can help farmers remain profitable.

During the afternoon session, Hilty also spoke about managing volatile markets, costs, and disasters. Several of his suggestions from the morning session were reiterated during this session. He also emphasized that farmers must understand their profit equation.

The profit equation is price multiplied by volume minus expenses equals profit. "Anytime you're faced with a management decision, you should consider how it affects the profit equation," said Hilty.

During his presentation, Hilty divides his top ten management suggestions into the different parts of the equation that they help farmers to manage. He also gave benchmarks for farmers to follow in the different

Cooperatives: An Inside Look

MARTINSBURG (Bedford Co.)–Penn State Cooperative Extension will host a "Coopera-tives: An Inside Look" workshop at the Morrisons Cove Memorial Park in Martinsburg on March 9, 2000 from 9:00 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

"Cooperatives are an excellent way for groups of producers to work together to market their product," said Melanie Barkley, Bedford County extension agent. This workshop is designed for producers to gain a better understanding of the cooperatives they do business with every day. "Producers will learn how to work with cooperatives for mutual benefit," said Barkley.

For more information you can contact the Penn State Cooperative Extension Office in Bedford County at (814) 623-4800. Cost for the workshop is $5.00. The fee includes materials and lunch.

ers closed 1.00 to fully 2.00 higher with the bulk of the advance placed on the top quality high Choice and Prime cattle. The market opened the week with mild improvement and then turned sharply higher on Thursday. Premiums for the fancier cattle increased locally, but this is not the norm as the spread between Select and Choice carcass values is actually becoming more narrow. The Northeast coast niche buyers turned up demand late in the week and left the major packers behind. Western feedlots traded 1.00 to mostly 2.00 higher this week at mostly 70.00 live and 111.00 dressed. Local Holstein steers sold 1.00-1.50 higher in active trading. Slaughter cow prices closed 1.00-2.00 higher and slaughter bulls finished firm. Slaughter bulls finished steady to 1.00 lower. Supply included 43 percent slaughter steers, 6 percent slaughter heifers, 40 percent slaughter cows, 5 percent bulls, with the balance feeders.

SLAUGHTER STEERS: High Choice and Prime 2-4 1135-1500 lbs 68.50-73.00, few up to 75.00; late in the week 69.75-73.00. Program Manager Hired For Dairy Alliance

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)–Tammy Perkins has been hired as program manager for the Dairy Alliance, a new initiative launched by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences with funding from the Pennsylvania General Assembly.

The Dairy Alliance was created to enhance the economic development of the Pennsylvania dairy industry. Dairy Alliance staff will collaborate with diverse stakeholders in the dairy industry, both inside and outside Penn State, to deliver educational programs to help producers take advantage of opportunities for future viability.

Perkins will assume key communications duties, with responsibility for directing calls from the Dairy Alliance's toll free dairy number (1-888-373-PA DAIRY), maintaining a calendar of dairy events on the Web (www.dairyalliance.com), and helping achieve the goals of the alliance. The hiring is the first in a series of four core staff for the Dairy Alliance.

The Dairy Alliance will play a pivotal role in increasing the profitability and sustainability of the industry, and will help to retain, develop and recruit economically viable dairies and dairy support businesses in Pennsylvania.

Before coming to the Dairy Alliance, Perkins was employed by the American Cancer Society as a cancer control director. As a regional representative for the Michigan Farm Bureau, Perkins advised five county farm bureaus and worked with producers and community representatives on a variety of issues. She also has worked as a Michigan 4-H program coordinator. She has a bachelor's degree in animal science and a master's degree in agriculture and extension education from Michigan State University.

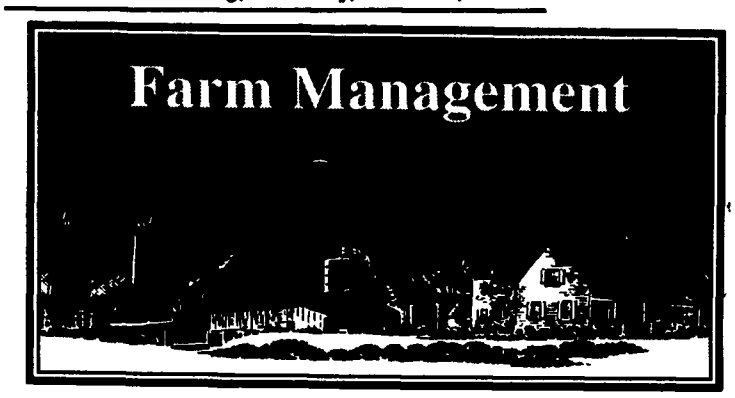
Farm Management



RISK MANAGEMENT ON THE PLANNING PLANET

John D. Rutherford Jr.
Farm Management Agent
Lebanon, Berks,
Dauphin Counties

Come with me, won't you, on a trip to the far-away galaxy of "Farm Business Management."

In that galaxy is a planet called "Business Planning." Business planning is made of a number of continents which are specific plans any business should consider. These plans include succession, future growth, and nutrient management, but there are others.

Of concern to this article is the risk management plan. You will see some aspects of this plan may be adjacent or even include other plans.

Before we set foot on this planet, let's consider why planning is important. (It's good to start with the easy questions.) Who would not rather deal with a situation calmly, with time to consult with the banker, nutritionist, extension agent, or whomever; evaluate the merits of different alternatives; and communicate your decision to key people (like selling the idea to your spouse)? It is not hard to understand where this environment is more likely to produce a good decision than making decisions within the hour in a high-pressure situation. As many alternative strategies as you can have laid out and set plans to handle, the better your decision making will be in those events. And your farm should be that much more profitable.

Risk management is the area on this planning planet where I want to go with this article. Why risk management? For a number of reasons, risk management has become an increasingly important aspect of farm management. Statistically, farms have been on a general trend toward larger size. Coupled with growth in size has been growth in scale. Not only are farms producing more because they are larger, but they have to produce more per unit as well. They do this because profit margins are shrinking.

Economic theory shows this will happen when technology makes more efficient production possible. The risk of losing a penny per unit of production is of little consequence when the margin is $2, but it gets pretty dear when the margin is only 5 cents! Farms are specializing on fewer enterprises, focusing more time on the specific management and regulatory aspects.

Market globalization not only means competing with producers all over the world, but also satisfying the whims of consumers everywhere. Do you remember the days when the protests of a French crowd could have no consequence on the marketability of your crop? What would happen now should the French decide they literally can't swallow meat from animals fed GMO grains? These are significant risks that farmers face today, without even mentioning everything that can go wrong when your livelihood depends on a biological process heavily influenced by weather. Top it off with the price interactions that usually move in the opposite direction as production, and you wonder why aspirin sales aren't higher in rural areas!

Risk is the possibility of harm or loss. So anyone discussing the "risk" of winning $100 or winning the lottery is not using the word correctly. It is not a risk to get less than the optimal (which is important in risk related to marketing), but it is a risk if getting less than a certain price means you have to default on a loan.

The risks that farmers deal with come from six different sources. The largest source is in production. Anything that can go wrong in growing a plant or animal at some time has. If that happened to you this year, would you be able to absorb the loss? How do you know these things aren't going to happen again? The majority of information available to farmers deals with mitigating the various diseases, pests, and other setbacks related to an organism growing in a certain place to be marketable at a certain time.

The rest of the risks are in alphabetical order, starting with environmental. This is a new one to farmers. It used to be the barn was cleaned out when time allowed and chemical sprays did not exist. Now nutrient management plans must be filed and followed to ensure that manure does not contaminate. And that pesticides are handled with care to promote the safety of applicator and the surrounding ecology.

Financial risk is a unique source to any business. On one hand, any impact on the farm is going to show up in the finances, so financial risk is inherent in everything. On the other hand, if the business has enough net worth (enough to absorb all of the potential loss), then there is minimal financial risk and the manager is free almost to ignore the possibility of loss. For instance, it is only in rare cases where we get really worked up over losing a postage stamp. Most of us can absorb the loss of 33 cents if a stamp is misplaced. But we whistle a different tune when it comes to the possibility of our dairy barn burning down.

Legal risks entail those topics which require a lawyer. Any laws dealing with employees, proper title to assets, or farm organization (to name a few) must be dealt with properly or the possibility for loss will exist.

Marketing risk has really been in the news these past couple years. These risks include having a market outlet for your product when it is ready and getting the necessary price out of it. As I said earlier, the possibility that you will get $5 for soybeans instead of $8 is not a risk if unless $5 is less than you need to stay in business. Knowing what number you need to stay in business is why you calculate your own cost of production (instead of having someone tell you what the state average is) and why you keep financial records.

The final risk is personnel. As farms grow in size, often employees are hired to allow the operator some time for management. These people may not understand fully their duties nor your equipment, or they may be accident prone. How will you keep your farm from harm should an employee make a mistake?

Knowing the sources of risk helps you think critically about the dangers faced within your operation. This self-assessment identifies the risks that need to be removed, modified, or in some other way controlled. This assessment has to be done on a per-farm basis because the risks and their potential, or perceived potential, are going to vary by farm and by manager. Some managers take on more risk than others. In the U.S. economy, we usually see payoffs greater when greater risks are taken. But some managers are not comfortable with higher risks, and some financial situations would not withstand the loss if the greater risk did not payoff.

Given the conditions of the farm and the level of risk aversion of the manager, the risks can be thought of in terms of their level of risk and frequency of occurrence. If you see that something is a high risk and happens often, then this risk most definitely needs to be addressed.

Conversely, potential problems that are rare in occurrence and of little consequence when they do could be overlooked in most any situation. However, there are two areas where risk or frequency are high enough that you must review your own prejudices toward risk and decide if this is one worth accepting or also finding a way to manage. Also keep in mind the financial

Session To Focus On Training Employees

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.)–Brubaker Farms at Mount Joy will host a session on training dairy feeding employees Thursday, March 23.

Area dairy managers are encouraged to enroll to receive information and materials needed to train dairy employees responsible for feeding management. The session is a Pennsylvania Dairy Alliance program coordinated by the Capital Regional Extension Dairy Team.

The morning session begins with registration at 10:15 a.m. The program will begin at 10:30 a.m.

During the morning session, Dr. Jud Heinrichs, Penn State Dairy and Animal Science and Virginia Ishler, Penn State program assistant, will discuss using dry matter, visual appraisal, and pH to evaluate silage samples. Lab activities will include procedures to test dry matters and what to look for when visually appraising a sample.

TMR mixing strategies and measurements will also be discussed during the morning program. This will include ingredient sequencing, mixing time, feed bunk refusal of TMRs, and mixing effects on particle size.

The afternoon program will look at the ensiling process, forage quality, and fermentation profiles. This will include looking at the impact of not achieving goals during ensiling.

Dr. Dennis Buckmaster, agricultural engineering, will discuss TMR wagon maintenance, calibration, and troubleshooting. Safety, loading, mixing, materials, unloading, inspection, and adjustments will all be addressed.

The session will conclude with a demonstration of Excel spreadsheets to record dry matter history, milk production and feed costs, and a spreadsheet to recalculate TMR mix sheets. The feeder's training will be at Brubaker Farms, 740 Union School Road, Mount Joy.

Directions to the farm are as follows:

From Rt. 283, travel south on Rt. 772 through Mount Joy. About 1.5 miles south of Mount Joy, turn right at the traffic light onto Union School Road, and turn left immediately onto Flory Rd. At the "T," turn right onto Musser Road and proceed about one mile to Brubaker Farms and to the dairy complex at the end of the farm lane.

Cost for the training including the lunch fee is $25 per participant. The session is limited to the first 30 people who apply.

To register for the training, call the Penn State Cooperative Extension customer service desk at the York County Office, (717) 840-7408. You may also fax your registration to (717) 755-5968 or e-mail to Tim Beck at tbeck@psu.edu. Register by March 13 so adequate materials may be prepared for the sessions.

If you have questions, contact Tim Beck at (717) 840-7408.

Pa. Shorthorn Breeders Meet

SOMERSET (Somerset Co.)–Members of the Pennsylvania Shorthorn Breeders' Association conducted their annual dinner meeting Feb. 12 here at Hoss's Restaurant.

John Allen, Saxonburg; Bradley Eisiminger, Waynesburg; Tim Fleener, Robesonia; and John Moore, Franklin were elected to three-year terms as directors. The 1999 officers re-elected to serve during the current year are president, Frank Stoltzfus; vice president, William Beinlich, Monongahela; and treasurer, Kay McElhaney, Hookstown.

Evening speakers were William McCoy, Lancaster, president of the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association and Paul Slayton, Bedford, director of the Pennsylvania Beef Council. McCoy spoke about the activities of the state cattlemen's association and emphasized the upcoming Beef Expo at State College in March. Slayton explained the activities of the beef council. The council disburses the state's share of the beef checkoff funds.

Bradley Eisiminger, who has served six years as director of the American Shorthorn Association, reported on the directors' meeting at the annual meeting at the recent Forth Worth Livestock Show.

The membership voted to conduct the 2000 Pennsylvania State Shorthorn Show in conjunction with the Keystone International Livestock Show in October at the Farm Show Complex.

David McElhaney, chairman of the Futurity Heifer Sale, announced that 18 head are entered in the sale at the Pennsylvania Beef Expo at State College.

standing of the business to determine which risks the business can withstand, regardless of these other judgments.

At this point it is time to seek out the risk managing options available for the unacceptable risks faced. These may range from the new production methods to some new way to market a crop. In many cases, a well-reasoned set of standard operating procedures will set the proper tone for your employees, neighbors, and officials. This is a tone that minimizes the possibility of problems and dims the accusation of negligence should one occur. Extension personnel, as well as many agricultural service providers, can assist you in both identifying potential risks and employing methods to manage them.

Risk management is an important means to protecting the accumulated, and potential, net worth of the business. Remember that risk management is only part of the whole "planet" that is business planning. I hope you have enjoyed your tour.

ALUMINUM PORTABLE ELEVATORS

Safety Shield Removed For Display Purposes Only
(Set up and ready to go just mount optional motor and install shields)
Reinforced Frame

EXCLUSIVE Boot Guard with Agitator

- Heavy-service, belt-type guard attached to sturdy hinge on boot
- Guard rests on flights - movement of flights provides agitating action - keeps material or silage out of boot and moving up the elevator

Includes incline hopper, motor mount, and required belts. Set Up and Ready to Go - Just mount motor (not included) and install shields. Optional polywear liner protects pan - super-slick, self-lubricating liner prevents freezedown.. reduces chain stretching...increases chain and pan life, cuts noise levels and lowers energy consumption by up to 30%

- Easy to handle - sturdily built
- Light weight - rust resistant - never needs painting
- Enclosed bottom trough for clean chain return and extra strength
- Take-up for chain at idler shaft - easily tightened without affecting drive adjustments
- Dropout hole with gate - helps prevent returning cobs and husks from jamming in boot end of elevator Allows returning cobs and husks to fall out before reaching boot Gate can be quickly closed when materials other than cob corn are being conveyed
- Plow-contour corded rubber flights designed for maximum efficiency, minimum ride-up

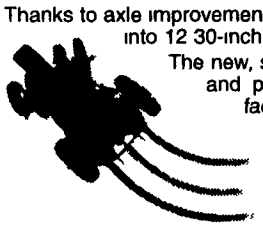
The Shortest Turning Large Tractor You Can Own Today! Simple, User-Friendly Operation.

Industry Leading Turning Radius

The revolutionary chassis of the MX Series Magnum improves your overall performance and productivity. In fact, the innovative Surround frame allows for the tightest turning radius in the industry, even with front duals!

Thanks to axle improvements, engine placement and a sleek hood design, the MX Series Magnum can easily turn into 12 30-inch rows with all row crop tire configurations on true 60-inch tread settings



The new, single-piece, sculpted, cast iron Surround frame is the key to the enhanced capabilities and performance of these tractors It enables the MX Series Magnum to offer the first factory front duals, dramatically improving both traction and flotation By balancing the chassis, we've significantly reduced the amount of front ballast required And the frame easily accomodates mounted chemical tanks or loaders, allowing you to perform multiple applications.

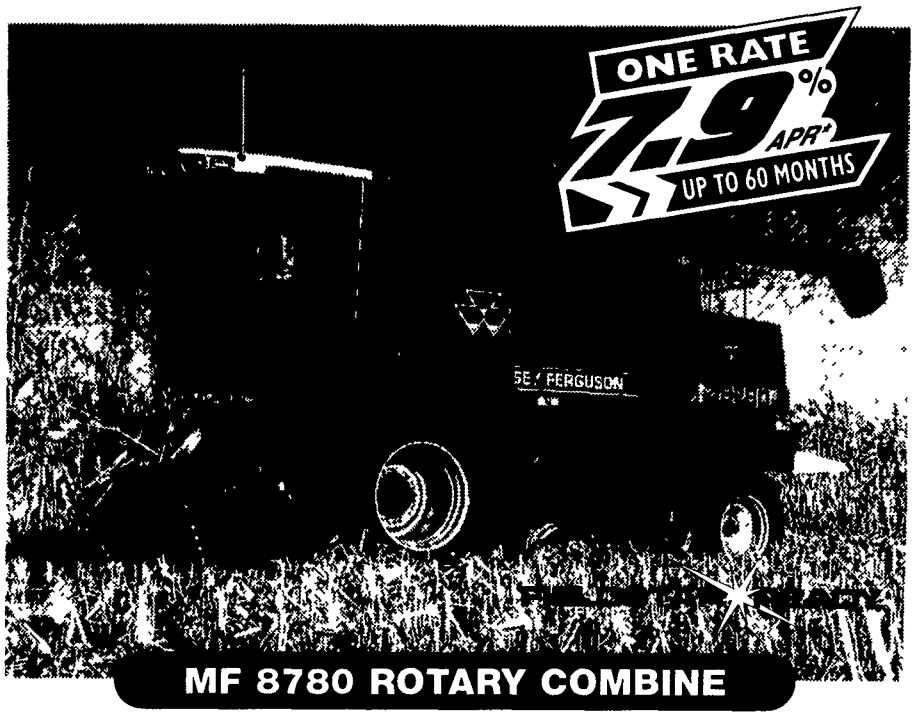
THE DRIVING FORCE WITH CONSTANT-SPEED ROTOR



MF 8780 ROTARY COMBINE

Now you can maintain your optimum rotor speed for maximum productivity, even as crop load varies, with the unique constant-speed rotor control.

The MF 8780 Rotary combine is also simply reliable and efficient. Fewer moving parts, belts and chains mean fewer problems during critical harvest periods. That also means an efficient and gentle combine for great sample quality.

See our revolutionary MF 8780 Rotary combine with its deluxe centered cab, unique direct-discharge rotor and patented feeder beater. It's the new driving force in harvesting.

Top Producers Choose Knight!

Congratulations to the La-Foster Farm

Terry and Gerald Foster are very proud of their record-breaking cow, Lucy, and rightly so. She produced 75,260 pounds of milk in her last lactation. They are also pleased with their Knight Reel Auggie® mixers, which, combined with the Foster's excellent management practices, have propelled the La-Foster herd average to the #1 milk production status in North Carolina. There is no comparison to the complete, palatable blend from a Knight Reel Auggie, with its patented reel and auger blending combination. Why else would the La-Foster Farm choose only Knight to feed their record-setting herd?

Compare the weed control costs for the Roundup Ready® corn system to conventional corn, and the numbers speak for themselves. By applying ReadyMaster™ ATZ or Roundup Ultra® herbicide, you not only get big savings on every acre, you'll benefit from the unsurpassed weed control of the Roundup Ready corn system. The high yield potential of Roundup Ready corn hybrids means you'll get even more value from every acre. And when you follow the Roundup Ready Technology Use Guide recommendations, your crops will be protected by the risk-sharing benefits of the Roundup TVP Rewards Program. So plant your confidence for the performance of Roundup Ready corn.

Seed cost and technology fee based on 3 acre planting. Cost based on estimated in-season package prices. Actual prices may vary. Roundup Ready gene Ready Master ATZ and Harness are registered-use pesticides. Bicep II Magnum is a registered-use pesticide. Always read and follow label directions for recommended agronomic practices and specific Roundup TVP Reward Program requirements and restrictions. Failure to do so may result in loss of Roundup TVP Rewards Program benefits. Regulatory approval of grain harvested from Roundup Ready corn does not imply that Monsanto is introducing the grain into channels of trade where the potential for export to those markets exists. Growers should refer to Monsanto's Technology Use Guide for information on crop stewardship to avoid

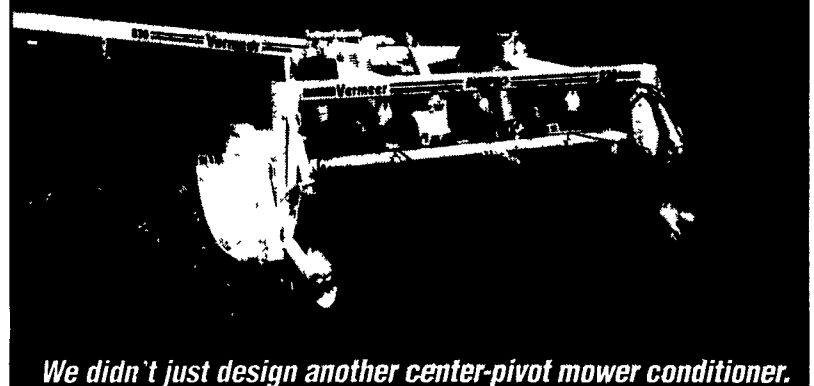
Vermeer® 830 DiscPro™ Mower Conditioner



We didn't just design another center-pivot mower conditioner.

We Improved It!

These are the mowers that not only cut hay but also handle the fire ant hills and many of the stray, unexpected obstacles that tend to jam up cutterbars and tear up the works in other machines.

Nothing compares!

New! DynaGuard™ Protection System.
New! Unique Lift Spring Suspension.
New! Tri-Shaft Drive-Line.
New! Modular Conditioning System.
New! Low-Profile Cutterbar Design.

PLUS, double wide skid shoes, heavier cutting discs, austemper heat-treated, shatter-resistant blades and a whole new level of performance, smooth handling, operator protection and versatility

Also, check out the new Vermeer 3 Point Mounted "Next Generation" Gator® Mowers with bi shaft cutter bar design heavy-duty cutting discs and knives plus exclusive Kevlar® curtain protection

Convention Panelist Says Farmers Must Make Individual Decisions On GMOs

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah–The nation's farmers ought to decide whether to plant seeds containing genetically modified organisms (GMOs) based on what's best for their farm operations rather than a perceived growing consumer demand for non-GMO farm products.

Allen Anderson, vice president of government affairs for St. Paul, Minn.-based Cenex Harvest States Cooperatives, delivered that message to the National Farmers Union's (NFU) 98th Anniversary Convention. Anderson said his company will not pay a premium for non-GMO crops but will make every effort to help farmers find a market for their products.

"Biotechnology has the potential to change the face of global agriculture," said Anderson, who works for the nation's second-largest farmer-owned cooperative. "But we face fear, wrong perceptions, and threats to good science."

The world's population is expected to grow by 25 million people each year through 2020, creating an increasing demand for food. Anderson said projections indicate that the world marketplace will demand 40 percent more grains. The use of biotechnology would allow U.S. farmers to fulfill 60 percent of the world's cereal grain needs.

Anderson challenged the perception of many European Union countries that farm and food products containing GMOs are a potential health threat. A number of European grocery companies–from the United Kingdom's Iceland stores to Germany's Edeka chain–do not sell products that contain GMOs. Scandinavia has laws making it illegal to import GMO products.

The real issue is whether European countries have sufficient regulatory and testing infrastructures to ensure a safe food supply, Anderson said. "The U.S. has better information to ensure food safety and satisfy consumer confidence."

Regardless of perceptions, Anderson said, even the EU's demand for non-GMO crops only will result in 10 to 20 percent of the world's grain being specially handled in costly ways to minimize GMOs from contaminating non-GMO grain. The remaining grain will be moved through conventional channels that do little to preserve a grain shipment's integrity and identity.

Anderson acknowledged that consumers would be more confident of GMO products if the frontline of the biotechnology revolution would have been focused on products that improve people's health. But the science of biotechnology is not that advanced.

"Biotechnology can make our lives better and the efficiencies on our farms better," he said. "The world community is going through some difficult times right now."

When there is a need to identify grain that does not contain GMOs and preserve its identity, testing products are available that can be used on the farm and in elevators to determine whether farm and food products contain GMOs.

Don Durondetta of Strategic Diagnostics Inc., a Delaware-based company that manufactures amino acid-based GMO test kits, said farmers can purchase test strips that allow them to determine whether a crop contains GMOs.

Using the same technology and strips as home pregnancy test kits, crop tests can be done on leaves, seed, or grain. The tests are accurate to 0.1 percent for soybeans and 0.5 percent for corn. Test strips are available for soybeans, corn, sugar beets, canola, and cotton.

"Without ever leaving the farm, farmers can determine whether there is one Roundup-Ready soybean in 1,000," Durondetta said.

New Generation Cooperatives One Way To 'Grow' Farm Income

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah–New generation cooperatives (NGC) are offering opportunities for farmers and ranchers to create new sources of income by adding value to crops and livestock.

Though these cooperatives are structured differently than "traditional" cooperatives, their success depends on if they allow for participation by producers who have limited resources, and if producers keep control of the business decisions.

Cooperative specialists shared their experiences and observations about NGCs with delegates attending the 98th annual convention of National Farmers Union (NFU).

In Colorado, 225 wheat farmers raised $5 million to buy a bakery. The new co-op, Mountain View Harvest, makes bread and has doubled the bakery's sales.

Dave Carter, president of Rocky Mountain Farmers Union, said NGCs such as Mountain View Harvest require high equity investments but offer higher returns as compared to traditional co-ops that favor a low-investment, low-return business structure.

Carter said it takes highly motivated people to organize successful projects such as Mountain View. It takes about three years to develop a co-op from concept to operation, so organizers need to have patience. Also, organizers need to resist the temptation to "adjust" financial projections during the feasibility studies in an attempt to make a cooperative cash flow.

NGCs require the best management available in order to succeed. Organizers need to budget accordingly, Carter said. Capitalization needs to be adequate for the business plan. At the same time, the investment plan should allow for participation by members who have limited financial resources, he said.

Communication is vital, he said. "Every start-up cooperative is going to through rough times," he said. If shareholders are kept in the dark, they will revolt, threatening the long-term success of the co-op.

James Matson, a co-op development specialist for the U.S. Department of Agriculture, said NGCs are structured differently as well. Membership in an NGC is closed rather than open. Also, stock equity is tied to delivery rights with an obligation to deliver. Finally, stock can be transferred to other producers, and stock value may appreciate or depreciate.

In some newer value-added cooperatives, one share of stock may also include the opportunity, and responsibility, to delivery one bushel of wheat or other commodity to the co-op.

Agreeing with Carter, Matson said the control of the co-op must remain with the producers who serve on the board. And these co-ops must find a way to allow producers of limited means to participate.

"The people who most need this access often don't have it," he said. NGCs may require from 30 to 50 percent equity up front.

"If it's a good project you can usually find the financing," he continued.

Organizers need to be open to the idea of entering a partnership with a competitor to attain the co-op's goals. For perspective, it cost a minimum of $50 million a year to establish a brand name. Another consideration is that the competition isn't going to stand idle while they lose market share to an upstart cooperative.

Matson said NGCs should keep their unallocated retained earnings to a minimum. The end goal is to return more income to the members.

According to Kyle Vickers, deputy director of the Missouri Department of Agriculture, NGCs need to focus on marketing, as "consolidation and concentration is also there in the retail industry." It will be difficult for value-added cooperatives to place products on store shelves.

State governments can do more to help producers form cooperatives. Missouri allows up to a $15,000 tax credit on a $30,000 investment in a co-op. Missouri has become more aggressive in providing cooperative development tools to farmers and ranchers.

The need for value-added cooperatives is more pressing as farm income continues to slide. Jeff Moser, NFU's director of economic and co-op development, said production expenses have risen from 60 percent of gross cash receipts in 1950 to more than 85 percent in 1990. Yet the farmer's share of the food dollar has dropped to less than 23 percent, and continues to spiral downward. Value-added cooperatives allow farmers and ranchers to recapture a larger share of the food dollar.

Dauphin Sets District Banquet

DAUPHIN (Dauphin Co.) –Individuals, families, and organizations are invited to the Dauphin County Conservation District's Annual Awards Banquet Thursday, March 23.

The conservation district will honor individuals and/or groups for their outstanding contributions to the conservation of our natural resources. This special event will begin at 6:30 p.m. in the auditorium of the Dauphin County Agriculture and Natural Resources Center in Dauphin.

The evening will begin with a buffet dinner of turkey and ham. Following the meal, an awards ceremony will recognize such individuals as the 1999 Outstanding Conservation Educator and 1999 Outstanding Conservation Farmer.

The feature presenter for the evening is the award-winning wildlife artist Ken Hunter, who will be presenting the program entitled 'Research of a Wildlife Artist." This entertaining and educational one-hour slide program explores the fieldwork of the artist, writer, photographer, and lecturer. The slide show features photos and stories of Pennsylvania black bears as the artist worked with Dr. Gary Alt, research biologist for the Pennsylvania Game Commission. The program will also include a humorous encounter with approximately 200 hogs from a local farm.

As a certified SCUBA diver, Ken also photographs and sketches underwater. In addition, he also mixes paint underwater to assure accurate color. The slide program will feature these unusual and at times humorous underwater ventures.

Tickets for the banquet are available from the Dauphin County Conservation District. The cost is $12.50 for adults, $6 for children 3-8 years old, and free for children under 3. Deadline for purchasing the tickets is March 16.

For more information, contact the conservation district office at (717) 921-8100.

What's heat forming?
In metal roofing and siding it's the best way to go! Here is why. Everlast heats the paint very hot on their Everlast II product before they cut and form it into roofing and siding. Tests have proven that heating paint before cutting and bending prevents virtually all microscopic cracks in the paint. Ask our competition if they heat form. It's important. Normally manufacturers form and cut at room temperature. Unfortunately that cracks the paint causing early rust at formed bends and edges.

"This Mixer Really Mixes Hay"
– Willis Conrad, Jr., Cedar Lane Farm

"We feed 8 lbs. of hay per cow. Our old Oswalt 250 couldn't handle that kind of volume. This Rotomix 354 that we got from Lapp's Barn Equipment, mounted on a 1980 International truck, does a great job. It handles 600 lb. of hay by weight."

Willis Conrad, Jr. is farm manager of Cedar Lane Farm owned by the Tucker Johnson family. They're milking 270 head kept in a tie stall barn, with a herd average of 28,200

What makes Mule Deer Bucks grow trophy racks in Western South Dakota? Why, South Dakota alfalfa of course, silly!

Would you like to plant some for your own livestock to thrive on?

Would you like to purchase South Dakota State University tested & grower direct proven varieties at $1.20/lb to $1.70/lb.?

These varieties will compete against the blended varieties of proprietary companies.

16 FERTILIZER

FOUR SIMPLE STEPS TO SUCCESS

Farm For Profit Step 1

ACHIEVE
- Contains nutrients and feeders which aid in sustaining microorganisms in the soil

REMEDY
- Contains nutrients and micronutrients which aid in sustaining microorganisms in the soil

TANK MIXING
STEP 2 PLANT NUTRITION
& STEP 1

We have found be adding 12 8 oz of Remedy and a small amount of Achieve per acre to the recommended amount of Farm For Profit Step 2 True Solution Starter Fertilizer and applying directly on the seed or in the seed cradle we got outstanding results

Farm For Profit Step 2
PLANT NUTRITION

FARM FOR PROFIT TRUE SOLUTION STARTER FERTILIZER
- Near neutral pH
- 100% available
- Root zone placement
- Low salt index
- Foliar Feeding

Farm For Profit has established their own standard for quality Unlike many liquid fertilizers Farm For Profit True Solution Starter Fertilizer is a solution It is not just particles suspended in liquid Each drop contains the exact N-P-K ratio of the standard formulation Farm For Profit liquid fertilizer is consistent and stable and won't settle out It handles easily It can be stored indefinitely When it is applied, it flows evenly and cleanly Farm For Profit True Solution Starter Fertilizer meets our standard for quality

VEGETABLE OIL

1 Encapsulates the chemical
2 Helps generate uniform droplet size
3 Greatly reduces chemical evaporation
4 Reduces chemical drift
5 Increases the coverage because of its spreading and sticking ability
6 Reduces chemical wash off
7 Gives you better control of the chemicals

One of Farm For Profit's main concerns is the level of soil and water pollution found today Our goal is to remove as much petroleum base material and farm chemical from the soil as possible Farm For Profit Step 3 Vegetable Oil gives us a means to reduce the level of both petroleum base materials and farm chemicals

Farm For Profit Step 4
TRAINED FIELD PERSONNEL

The Farm For Profit Authorized Distributor or Dealer in Your Area Will
- Explain the total Farm For Profit program to you
- Explain the best fertilizer program for your operation
- Suggest ways to improve the efficiency of your chemical program
- Explain to you what other farmers have been doing to cut their operating expenses while maintaining or increasing their production output

Farmers Helping Farmers
That's what Farm For Profit is all about!

Catastrophic Crop Insurance A Must For Bethlehem Grower

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

B E T H L E H E M (Northampton Co.) — Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association (PMCGA) Vice President Guy Wagner knows how important catastrophic insurance, or CAT, can be for producers.

Because of last year's devastating drought, Wagner recalls that the corn on 40 acres was so worthless he simply disced it in.

CAT insurance for Wagner amounted to $60 per crop.

"I always took it," he said during an interview late in December at his farm. Farmers experienced about a 70 percent crop loss in the county. "How could you not, especially the past year, when producers got less than half a crop?"

Ever since Wagner purchased the farm business from his father, Walter, in 1990, he has bought crop insurance for his 880 acres of corn and 400 acres of soybeans, for a total of $120.

As for CAT insurance, "most don't take it," said Guy. "They never thought the year could have been like this either. You just never know."

CAT insurance pays off only a fraction of the crop

EMPORIUM (Cameron Co.)–She says farming is expensive, and would he like to try bowling instead?

The humor in LuAnn Reed's voice soon turns to pride when she talks about her husband, Jeff, farming part time on his family farm, and winning the 1999 Pennsylvania 5-Acre Corn Club Award in the hand-harvest class with 204.3 bushels per acre.

Jeff and LuAnn Reed both work full time off the farm. In their spare time, they farm about 45 acres of cropland on his home farm plus an additional 60 acres on his father, Earl's, farm.

What pleases this Cameron County couple the most

WHERE CAN YOU CUT CORNERS ON CORN PRODUCTION?

After last year's dreadful year, many corn growers are asking where and how they can reduce input costs in corn production.

The key is to focus on those inputs that give us the most consistent responses to our investment. Let's review how each of several common corn inputs have produced a return on investment in our trials here at Penn State.

One input you might think about is seed. In our trials there is often a large variation in performance–about 30 to 40 bushels per acre. So this input is not one to cut corners on. Some, but not all, premium-priced hybrids are top yielders. Check out independent data to get some idea how new hybrids perform.

Our trials have shown relatively low (3-4 bushel per acre) yield responses to the Bt gene itself under normal planting conditions, as have

Corn Growers Say River Development Is Key To U.S. Agriculture

CORN TALK NEWS
PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.–Improving the capacity of the locks and dams on the Illinois and Mississippi rivers remains a top priority for the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) to maintain farming's profitability.

"The future of agriculture rests on drastically needed improvements along the Mississippi and Illinois rivers," said Greg Guenther, a farmer from Belleville, Ill., and a member of the NCGA's Corn Board.

NCGA supports the Corps of Engineers plan to double the capacity of the 600-foot chambers at the Mississippi River Lock and Dam 25, 24, 22, 20 and 21 and LaGrange and Peoria locks on the Illinois River. To further improve the river's efficiency, NCGA is pushing for the extension of guide walls at Mississippi Lock and Dam 18-14. The upgrade will cost $1.5 billion and take about 20 years to complete.

Many of the locks and dams are either at or beyond their designed capacity, affecting both grain going south and products such as coal and steel moving north. "They are more than 60 years old and were only designed to last 50 years. The Corps did a great job with the design and operation, but we need to move U.S. river transportation into the 21st Century," Guenther said.

Here's one example of the river's importance. Every year during the 1990s, Iowa farmers shipped an average of 203 million bushels of corn and 66 million bushels of soybeans on the Mississippi River. In addition, a large volume of Iowa grain is railed or trucked to the Illinois River for shipment. For corn, the Mississippi shipments equal more than one of every eight rows grown in Iowa.

"Efficient river transportation supports grain prices from South Dakota to Ohio. The improved river system protects our export market by making us competitive in spite of our higher production costs. Our competitiveness is not based on our cost of production, but on our ability to deliver corn to deep-water ports at a lower cost than other countries."

Guenther has personally seen what the competition offers. He has visited Argentina's answer to the Mississippi, the Parana River, and viewed the $650 million upgrade of Argentina's barge system. "They have 2,200 miles of river system with not one single lock. They don't have three-day waits to move 15 barges through. It's a super highway to them," Guenther said.

"If U.S. farmers can't move agricultural products efficiently and cheaply, the United States will become less and less competitive in export markets and we will lose domestic markets as well," Guenther said. "Unless we make the improvements along the river, U.S. agriculture will pay the price."

many other university trials. On the other hand, some of the best yielding hybrids in our trials contain the Bt gene, so you can't generalize that Bt hybrids are not cost effective.

In my book, each hybrid needs to be evaluated independently. The bottom line is to look for hybrids with a consistent track record and then consider price. Gradually introduce new hybrids into your lineup and try to get some variation in maturity as a hedge against drought stress.

Tillage is an input that probably gets overused. I know many corn producers are not satisfied with the performance of no-till corn. With careful attention to compaction, weed control, and crop rotation, though, yields of no-till corn can be similar or better than tilled corn, with less expense. If you're not convinced, then try some no-till on selected fields following sod or soybeans. Studies have shown increased yields and success of no-till under these conditions.

Nitrogen (N) is an input that often gets targeted for cutbacks because it is a large out-of-pocket cost. Often, though, on nonmanured ground, we see large yield responses to N. Cutting back to 100 pounds per acre where you need 150 might result in a 10-bushel yield loss. So you save $7.50 on N and lose $25 per acre in yield. Shoot for 1.1 pounds of N per bushel of your yield goal and then adjust for your manure and previous crop credits. Cut back on those fields where its justified.

P and K inputs could be cut back in some cases–if you have a soil test. Generally soils in the optimum to high range for P and K have a low likelihood of showing a yield response. We are mostly fertilizing these to maintain soil test levels. In our trials, it is often difficult to show yield responses under these conditions, unlike the situation we see with N or hybrid treatments where we often see large differences. Corn still can respond to starter fertilizers at high soil test levels, however. Starters are probably not justified when soils reach the excessive level for P (350 pound P205 per acre) unless you're planting very early under cool soil conditions.

Weed control is another area where cutbacks can be made but this is risky and requires good management. Weed control failures result in lower yields. We know that where you have had excellent weed control for several years, the soil weed seedbank may be reduced and you may be able to get by with lower rates or lower cost programs. Some of our large growers use this type of strategy–but it requires good management. Part of the trick of getting by with lower cost weed control programs is to work hard to use rotations, tillage, or sanitation (keeping problem weeds from spreading) to keep weed populations down. This strategy is most effective if you have the ability to followup, if necessary, with a low-cost, postemergent program or cultivation. If weeds took over after last year's drought-stunted corn, then your weed seedbank has probably just got a new replenishment and you may not be a great candidate for weed control cutbacks.

Insecticide inputs are another one to consider. Some growers continue to use corn rootworm row insecticides on all their acres. We just don't see a benefit on corn following soybeans or sod and I've been on lots of good farms where they don't see a need, either. We have not seen the corn rootworm problem yet in rotated crops like they have in the Midwest. So if you're in this category, this is another potential cutback. Given the rootworm populations in some corn fields last year, I'd be hesitant about following corn this year without some rootworm control. For folks who spent a few bucks an acre scouting last year for rootworm beetles and know their counts are low, here's a place to save $10 to $15 per acre.

There are also lots of low-cost management details you want to be sure to include in your program to get the most out of this year's crop. Make sure that planter is tuned up and ready to work properly, monitor seed depth. plant early, and check each field for problems 2-3 weeks after planting and then again at 4-6 weeks.

Yes, there is potential to cut back in some areas of corn production, but it is not easy. It requires some knowledge and some management information. If you have soil test and scouting data, you'll be ahead of the game. If you need help making these decisions, seek out a professional crop adviser who can help you decide on the best combination of inputs for your situation. If you decide to cut back in some way, by all means, do it carefully and intelligently.

Five-Acre Winners

about being Five-Acre Corn Club champions is how they thought they could never win and how they spent the past seven years gradually making changes as they learned more about soil pH, row width, plant population, and fertilizers.

"We thought we did good with 44.6 bushels per acre the first year we participated in 1999," Jeff said.

The remote northern Pennsylvania county where the Reeds live is not known for high production agriculture. There's only one full-time farmer and about 10 to 15 part-time farmers in the whole county. In addition, they must deal with their Leck Kill soil type and elk and bear damage. So how did they do it?

"We not only live farther north, our field is on top of a hill. We plant short-season 85 to 90-day hybrid corn and usually plant around May 17. This year, we were able to plant early–May 13," Jeff explained. In fact, many factors went their way this year.

"When most of Pennsylvania was in a drought," LuAnn said, "we didn't have a better growing season. We had perfect weather when we needed it. You just pray God gives you the weather you need. It has to do with the good Lord and a lot of family support."

But credit should go to crops management, too. Jeff first entered the Five-Acre Corn Club seven years ago and started learning a great deal about management tools and planning from Cameron and Elk counties Penn State Extension agent Greg Burns. Jeff started taking soil samples and decreased his row width from 40 to 36 inches.

In addition to winning the Five-Acre Corn Club Award, Earl, left and Jeff Reed enjoy the 1946 M tractor that George Myers purchased many years ago. The log barn in the background is more than 100 years old.

In 1997, his corn plot yielded 164.9 bushels per acre. Their seed salesman, Ralph Devillars, had told them 175 bushels per acre, maybe 200, was "doable." This year's 204.3 bushels per acre surprised them all.

To prepare this year's plot, Jeff started last fall by using Roundup as a burndown on the alfalfa/timothy/reed canarygrass sod. One day this past spring, he spread nine tons of manure per acre and then plowed the following day. He then disked, dragged, and cultipacked the field. He planted Pioneer 3893 with a final population of 23,282.

When the corn reached one foot high, Jeff applied a mixture of Bladex (2 ½ pounds per acre) and Banvel (½ pint per acre) approximately one month after planting. He used 8-32-16 corn starter and MAP with ACA root growth additive at 250 pounds per acre to "get the corn out of the ground fast."

Jeff gradually raised the soil pH from 4.9 to 6.9 over the years by applying two tons of lime each year. He disked in 375 pounds of straight urea per acre this past year.

The Reed's farming operation features a few other additives, too. Jeff's father, Earl and mother, Verna help with the fieldwork and by cooking meals. LuAnn's parents, Max and Sharon Narby, run errands when needed.

When Jeff showed an interest in farming in the '80s, his grandfather, George Myers, offered the farm to them through a life estate. When his grandmother, Kathryn Myers, passed away this June, they inherited the farm.

They farm 15 acres of corn, 35 acres of the alfalfa/reed/canarygrass/timothy hay, and three acres of wheat. They also own 14 head of beef.

Although the Reeds live in Emporium and work away from the farm, they want to keep improving the crops, updating the machinery, and enjoying the farm that's been family-centered for generations. Although the Reed's own the farm, it will always be known as the Myers Farm on Bryan Hill out of great respect for Jeff's grandparents.

A bumper crop on Jeff and LuAnn Reed's farm earned them the Five-Acre Corn Club Award.

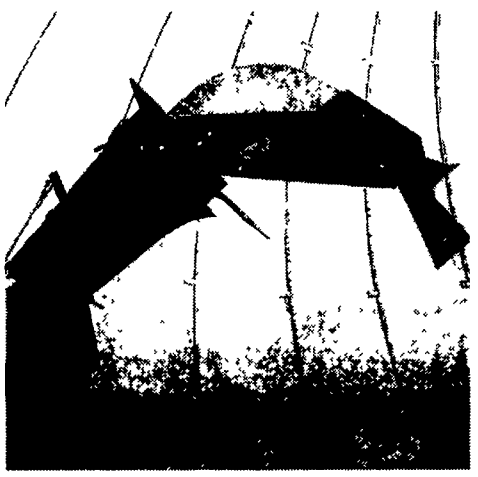
Silage Spreaders with a Heritage of Quality

Lancaster Level-Flo has been the leader in non-motorized silage spreaders for more than 25 years. Each spreader is specifically designed to meet the needs of the individual operator.



Choose the spreader that best matches the equipment you use to fill your silo.

The Model 1030 Multi-Flo® is our standard silage spreader With a 9" gooseneck, it is designed for average capacity blowers and silo sizes

The Model 1200 Multi-Flo® has a 12" wide gooseneck Its larger size all but eliminates plugging problems, even when you blow in haylage It is especially helpful in larger silos

The BlueMax® is built for those who push high-capacity silo filling equipment to the limit All parts of the BlueMax® subject to wear are made 25% heavier - and the stainless steel plate is twice as heavy. For strength, there are reinforcements all around. Even our well-known non-binding hinge is heavier.

National Corn Growers Say Biosafety Protocol Keeps Trade Channels Open

NCGA credits the Biosafety Protocol agreement concluded Jan. 29 with keeping trade channels open for U.S. corn. Furthermore, NCGA was a significant participant at the Montreal meeting, advising U.S. negotiators about the influence the protocol would have on corn growers.

"We can trade corn under this protocol today," said Susan Keith, NCGA senior director of public policy. "We will continue to ensure that we can trade under any future refinements of the protocol."

NCGA grower-leader Bob Boeding from Lawler, Iowa, and Keith helped U.S. negotiators understand how the protocol would affect trade and U.S. corn growers.

"NCGA's goal was for the protocol to protect biodiversity without disrupting trade," said Boeding. He also participated in a panel of U.S. and Canadian farmers who explained their use of biotechnology and its benefits to journalists and negotiators at the meeting.

"Nothing in this agreement should dissuade U.S. farmers from using biotechnology," said Keith. "We don't see this as requiring segregation. That will be a market-driven decision. Contrary to what some others may be saying, the biotech sky is not falling.

"The protocol emphasizes there aren't changes to the rights and obligations under existing international agreement such as the World Trade Organization (WTO)," Keith said. "Parties to the WTO will continue to follow legitimate science in assessing risks."

A key element of the protocol is a process that allows governments to signal whether or not they are willing to accept imports of agricultural commodities that include living modified organisms by communicating their decision to the world community via an Internet-based Biosafety Clearing-house.

"We have a good product to sell both here and abroad. I believe in the long run that the information clearing-house will work for the good of NCGA," Boeding said. "It will provide science-based data that grain buyers and processors will need for making sales to customers."

The protocol will be signed in Nairobi from May 15-26 and will go into effect after 50 countries ratify it, which may take as much as two years.

ALS RESISTANCE CONFIRMED IN OHIO

Mark Loux and Jeff Stachler
Ohio State University

Ohio State University has identified ALS-resistant weeds in a number of fields in Ohio, and we are in the process of characterizing additional populations of giant and common ragweed for resistance. We have predicted for a number of years that ALS-resistance could develop based on the intense use of ALS-inhibitors in Ohio and the identification of ALS-resistant weeds across the United States in recent years.

ALS-inhibitors include all sulfonylureas (Classic, Canopy, Pinnacle, Accent, Beacon, Spirit, Exceed, Harmony Extra, Peak, Permit, etc), imidazolinones (Pursuit, Scepter, Raptor, etc), and sulfonamides (Python, FirstRate, etc).

Some highlights of our research on ALS resistance:

•So far we have confirmed ALS-resistance in one out of 10 cocklebur populations screened, one out of 3 Powell amaranth populations, one out of one waterhemp populations, 13 out of 16 horseweed (marestail) populations, one out of 3 giant ragweed populations, and 7 out of 8 common ragweed populations.

•Most ALS-resistant populations are cross-resistant among all ALS inhibitors with exception of the cocklebur population. For example, ragweeds resistant to Classic are also resistant to Raptor and FirstRate. Four of the 13 horseweed populations showed variable response between FirstRate and Classic, indicating incomplete cross-resistance.

•We sampled common and giant ragweed seed from 125 additional fields during 1999 where ALS resistance is suspected. We will be screening these populations for ALS resistance in the greenhouse this winter/spring.

•Fields where ragweed have been confirmed to be ALS-resistant have a history of frequent ALS inhibitor use, in some cases, average one application per year. In many of these fields, though, ALS inhibitors were used twice in the same year in soybeans (example: Canopy PRE + Classic POST). Use of ALS inhibitors on an every other year basis does not seem to be sufficient to prevent the development of resistant populations.

•When a ragweed population is ALS-resistant, mixing low rates of another herbicide mode of action with an ALS inhibitor (e.g., Flexstar + FirstRate), will not provide adequate control. Labeled rates of the alternative mode of action are generally necessary to ensure control, and it will be most effective to rotate to an alternative mode of action when a population is resistant.

Based on our field sampling, we suspect a considerable number of fields across the state will show resistant populations within the next several years unless herbicide programs are altered now. Fields with variable response to ALS inhibitors within the past several years are possible candidates, especially where one observes dead plants next to relatively unaffected plants.

We suggest that producers review field herbicide use histories. Fields where ALS inhibitors have been used several years in a row, or every other year with multiple applications per year, are most likely to be the first to develop resistance. However, even a single application every other year could result in resistance. Fields following this pattern of ALS inhibitor use should be rotated to an alternative mode of action. Rotating to Roundup Ready soybeans would be a good option for suspect fields, but other options are also available.

Catastrophic Crop Insurance

costs, however. Insurance pays 50 percent of yield at 55 percent of price. There is no basis — the price is taken right off the Chicago prices at, most likely, when the price hits bottom.

This year, the payment is $1.16 per bushel for corn and $2.89 per bushel for soybeans.

Wagner has owned the operation for about a decade. He farms with wife Linda and their daughter, Mary, 7 and Guy's stepson Bill, 16.

Guy moved into the location where grain elevators and a shop now stand north of Bethlehem. The 5,000 square foot building itself was actually moved to the current location in October 1995.

The past year was easily the worst drought Guy — and the "old guys" he spoke to, he noted — have ever seen. Rain stayed 10 inches behind normal near the end of the growing season. Then the rains came as a result of Hurricane Floyd, which didn't help the corn at all.

Normally, soybeans bring about 52.5 bushels to the acre. This year, Wagner harvested only 20 bushels per acre.

Five-year proven average is 154 bushels of corn per acre. The past year he harvested only 47.1 bushels of corn per acre.

Though Wagner calls himself a Pioneer hybrid grower, he actually plants tests plots all over his operation of all kinds of varieties, he noted. He said he'll be "100 percent Pioneer" in 2000.

Altogether Wagner grows about 300-400 acres of strip plots using a 12-row corn planter. He has used a GPS satellite system for mapping harvests and runs a yield monitor.

But for the past year, the data collected could be useless. "We might just take everything we collected this year and throw it away," he said.

Some varieties that didn't do anything in extreme drought don't stand a chance. In dust bowl years such as last summer, Wagner noted, varieties have to show drought tolerance or he won't plant them.

Wagner recalls that 1996, a year with adequate rainfall, was the best growing year he ever had. Yields for 1997 were average, 1998 yields were about 10 percent under the average, and 1999 was a disaster.

In 1996, the best year, Wagner harvested 168.1 bushels per acre of corn and 61 bushels per acre of beans.

Beans endure droughts a little better and Wagner is increasing his bean plantings in 2000.

Wagner farms 1,200 acres. But each year acres are being continuously lost to development. Wagner lost another 33 acres the past year. The constant development seems "almost unsustainable," Wagner said.

Because of the drought and, later in the season, high winds from the hurricane, some ears dropped off. Those that lay on the ground will cause volunteer corn to be a problem.

For Wagner, soybeans are also a better crop to grow because nutrients have been built up in the soil with corn crops sufficiently that growing soybeans will require no fertilizer or other soil inputs.

Wagner has used 100 percent no-till many years. He's had to use some light discing to deal with slug problems in soybeans, which can cause huge crop losses. When slugs emerge, they eat the foliage off of whole plants.

They also deep till to break up compaction — a problem at the farm since Wagner purchased it from the former owner.

"I'm a firm believer in no-till," noted Wagner.

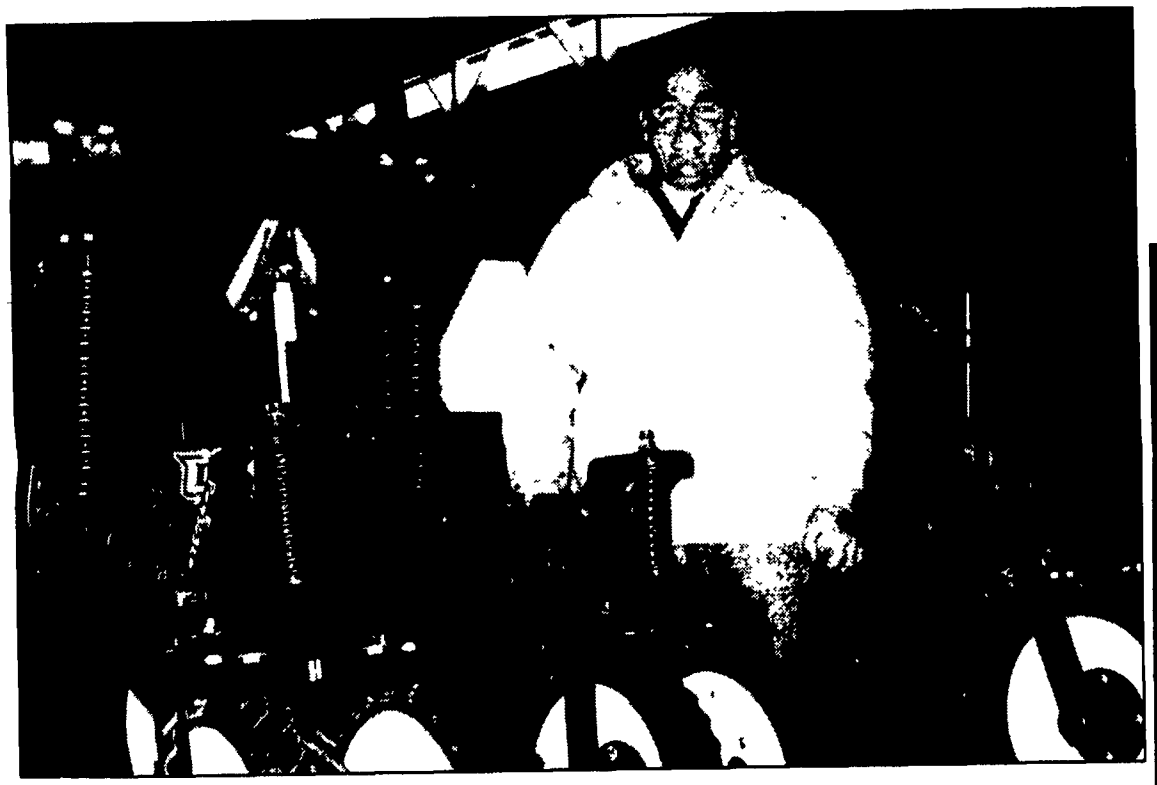
Wagner prefers growing corn, he said. "I prefer watching corn grow," he said, and was devastated by what he had to witness last summer. "It hurts your feelings."

He thinks a large percentage of work, because of drought, is completely wasted.

As for insect controls, corn borer is not a big problem for the farm, Wagner noted. Though he has been planting Roundup Ready soybeans for three years, the farm, because of the biogenic crops controversy, is switching back to conventional soybeans.

"If we can't sell them," he said, because of the biogenic scare, "we'll be in real trouble." Until the industry comes up with strate-

(Turn to Page 9)



Ever since Guy purchased the farm business from his father, Walter, in 1990, he has bought crop insurance for his 880 acres of corn and 400 acres of soybeans, for a total of $120.

Advances Mean Better Products

Del Voight
Agronomy Extension Agent
Lebanon County

There are some new developments producers may take advantage of coming this spring. Herbicide package mixes have changed with little really new products and some brand new seed treatments.

In the area of commercial and farmer used seed treatments there have been some advances brought on by the Food Quality Protection Act. The use of Lindane™ in seed treatments for the control of wireworm and seed corn maggots is under review and because of the concern for losing the product Gufstafson™ will be marketing a new product called Kernal Guard Supreme™. This product will serve to replace the use of Germate Plus™ in the farmer used seed treatments. It combines the pyrethroid insecticide permethrin with the fungicide carboxin for control of both insects and seedling disease. It is labeled in both Corn and Soybeans. Early plantings and where heavy manure applications or no till situations occur should receive a seed treatment.

In the commercial seed treatment side there are two new products being marketed. Novartis introduced the product Proshield™ which contains tefluthrin (same active ingredient as Force) which is a pyrethroid insecticide and offers control of wireworm, seed maggots, and other soil borne insects. It will be available only in limited quantities on nhybrids purchased from Northrup King™. The new technology will reduce applicator exposure and lessen the amount of product needed per acre decreasing environmental exposure. Another commercial treatment (must be applied by the seed company or licensed person) is Gaucho™ which contains imadicloparid (same active ingredient as Provodo™, Admire™, Grub X™, and Merit™) a chloro nicotinyl insecticide. It will offer the same insect control as Proshield™ at lower use rates.

With rootworm-resistant corn being developed and looking at an early 2001 release combined with new seed treatments, producers will have more tools to combat the 10,000 species of insects, 1,800 kinds of weeds, and 1,500 plant diseases that attack crops.

In the area of herbicide releases for 2000 there are many reformulations and generic glyphosate materials available. The 2000 weed control guides ($6) are now available through the extension office, which detail the many products. The guides will be available as part of the March 23 pesticide update meeting, which this year we are charging $10 to attend, which pays for the guide and other materials. This year Umberger's of Fontana will be sponsoring refreshments at the meeting.

Many products were reformulated to utilize lower use rates in 2000. For example, Frontier X2 6EC™ will offer the same control as the original product but will be applied at half the rate. Dual II Magnum™ and Bicep Magnum™ also contain a more active s metolochlor and will also lessen use rates. Other marketing strategies are the prepackage mixes of Round Up and other products such as Extreme™ which adds Pursuit™ to the Round Up™ and Backdraft™ which adds Scepter™ to the package. Celebrity Plus™ will combine Accent™ and Distinct™ (Banvel™ + diflufenzopyr) it will replace having to mix products and eliminates Celebrity™ (Accent™ + Banvel™).

For a complete list and explanation of new products, call (717) 270-4391 or e mail me directly at dgv1@psu.edu for the free "What's New in Agronomic Weed Control 2000" factsheet.

Catastrophic Crop Insurance

gies to deal with the controversies, conventional, more expensive, less reliable herbicides must be used.

At planting, Wagner uses a starter fertilizer, a custom blend 6-33-22 at 200-350 pounds per acre placed four inches off the rows. He uses liquid nitrogen at 45-60 gallons per acre, depending on the rotation. He does not sidedress.

Wagner relies on satellite maps of the field to determine applications to improve yields. But the past year, because of the severe drought, data may be unreliable.

"This year's data — I don't know if it's worth anything," he said.

As the PMCGA vice president, Wagner noted he will strive for equality in how the Five-Acre Corn Club contest measurements are taken, and come up with standards all the counties can use.

"We have been talking about standardizations in the tests conducted," he said. Some counties have different criteria for assessing yields. With additional work, those criteria can be standardized for all who participate, Wagner noted.

Federal Grants Can Pay For Crop Insurance

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Using recent government allocations as relief for last year's drought and applying them to crop insurance makes benefits "free or better," noted a catastrophic crop insurance expert.

Gene Gantz, president of Ag Risk Strategies Inc., Millersburg, said he gets "emotional," he said, "when people say (crop insurance) doesn't pay.

"How much better than 3-to-1 does it have to be before they realize it pays?" he asked about 140 crop growers and agri-industry representatives.

Gantz spoke in early February this year at the Pennsylvania Corn and Soybean Conference at the Radisson Penn Harris Hotel and Convention Center in Camp Hill.

Growers, said Gantz, need to "manage our risk. Gambling has no place in the business of farming."

Gantz himself is merely a crop risk management consultant and he doesn't sell crop insurance or hedging.

Yet only one out of four eligible acres in the state was covered by crop insurance in the horrible drought year of 1999. Three quarters of the growers didn't participate, he noted. Losses from the drought and other events are estimated at $40-60 million — potential money that should be returned to good use in the farm community.

Crop insurance, he assured those at the conference, can "make you money in good and bad years." Crop insurance guarantees a payday, he said.

Gantz reviewed several strategies, including several shares of risk and costs associated. They have to be matched carefully to farm operating costs and be part of an overall farm management picture.

Gantz reviewed several programs, including crop revenue coverage for Pennsylvania. He also reviewed some requirements required by Act 57, which provides $5.6 million for crop insurance assistance grants by Pennsylvania. The purchase of crop insurance, according to a letter from the secretary of agriculture, is a condition for receiving federal crop loss assistance under the 1999 Federal Crop Disaster Program. The grants will help defray the cost of purchasing crop insurance in 2000 and 2001.

"Remember," Gantz told those at the conference, "if you're not doing these things, a whole bunch of your competitors is."

President Releases FY-2001 Budget

The Clinton administration's fiscal 2001 budget, which was released Feb. 7, proposes $65 billion in spending for the USDA. This marks a decrease of nearly nine percent from the current 2000 fiscal year, during which USDA totals have been inflated by off-budget, emergency spending.

NCGA staff members are still analyzing the specific proposals and will follow up with additional information as necessary. Some highlights of particular interest to corn growers include:

•Income assistance. A new Supplementary Income Assistance Program to provide producers with payments (that are crop specific and based on actual production) if projected gross income, including other government payments, falls below 92 percent of the preceding five-year average.

•Crop insurance. Funding to extend the premium discount available in 1999 and 2000 for farmers who purchase buy-up coverage.

•Trade. $90 million, the maximum authorized level, for the Market Access Program (MAP), and $27.5 million for the Foreign Market Development Cooperator Program (FMD), unchanged from this year's level.

•Conservation. A new $600 million Conservation Security Program to provide annual payments to farmers and ranchers who implement sound conservation practices.

•Research. A 50 percent increase in funding for the development, production and commercialization of bio-based products and bioenergy.

For more details on these and other agriculture-related provisions of the administration's budget, check USDA's web site at: http://www.usda-.gov.

White House, Farm Groups Gear Up For China Fight

Top Clinton administraton officials recently rallied the agriculture community's support for congressional passage of permanent normal trade relations (PNTR) with China.

Ohio Corn Growers Association leaders and NCGA staff members were among those who participated in the White House meeting. Agriculture is the sector of the U.S. economy that's expected to benefit most from China's entry into the World Trade Organization, and U.S. approval of PNTR is a key step towards that accession.

"This is going to be the toughest fight we face this year on Capitol Hill," White House Chief of Staff John Podesta told the group.

He and others noted that organized labor has already begun lobbying Congress and running advertisements in opposition to opening up trade with China. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman emphasized that the intensity of agriculture's lobbying efforts will be key to a successful vote.

Commerce Secretary Richard Daley echoed that message, underscoring the importance of grassroots contact with members of Congress, particularly back home in their districts.

U.S. Trade Representative Charlene Barshefsky also participated in the meeting, outlining benefits of the China trade pact not only for agriculture, but for the U.S. and world economies.

Growers Gearing Up For Ethanol Battle In Congress

As the second session of the 106th Congress kicks into full gear, corn growers are once again engaged in a major legislative battle to save ethanol.

Mounting national concern about the environmental and health problems posed by MTBE has given momentum to efforts to lift the Clean Air Act's oxygenate requirement–a move that would be devastating for ethanol. A particular trouble point right now is S. 1886, a bill introduced by Sen. James Inhofe (R-Okla.), chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee's subcommittee on clean air, private property and nuclear safety. The measure is cosponsored by full committee chairman Bob Smith (R-N.H.) and Sen. Dianne Feinstein (D-Calif.).

S. 1886 would give individual governors the authority to waive the oxygenate requirement for reformulated gasoline sold in their states. NCGA wrote to every member of the Senate on Feb. 11, telling them that gutting the Clean Air Act is not the answer to the MTBE problem and urging them to oppose S. 1886.

For NCGA's latest issue paper on ethanol, visit the Public Policy section of NCGA's Website at http://www.ncga.com/04growers/main/index.html and look under "What's New."

PMCGA, Seed Industry Want Your Membership

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.)–Consider joining NCGA and PMCGA today to be part of a national effort to promote corn and corn producer-related issues.

With our Membership Incentive Program (MIP), corn producers who grow five or more acres of corn can now join both organizations with little real cost.

The MIP program works like this:

If you sign up for a three-year joint membership for $75, you can receive a free bag of seed from one of our participating industry partners listed on the form. To get signed up, complete your membership form and send it in to our office at the address listed on the form along with a check for $75 made payable to PMCGA to cover the three-year membership.

Our office will then send your name to the seed company you have selected and a coupon to you indicating you have qualified for the program. You will then be contacted by one of the seed company reps and you seed will be delivered before the planting season.

This is a win-win-win proposition–you get a bag of seed and membership in a large national organization for $75, NCGA and PMCGA get your support, and the seed industry gets to showcase new genetics to key producers.

As a member of NCGA, you will be part of a 30,000-member national organization that is addressing many of the issues we face in the industry. Current issues include corn prices, industry consolidation, environmental issues, and development of new markets for corn.

NCGA also sponsors the National Corn Yield Contest and Commodity Classic. They also send a quarterly newsletter to all members, entitled the National Corn Grower. PMCGA sponsors one or two conferences a year, the five-Acre Corn Club, Corn Talk, and helps to promote corn issues to the public at many local events.

If you are a corn producer who grows at least five acres of corn, consider joining for three years today and taking advantage of the MIP program. Use the MIP program to look at some new hybrids that some of our seed company partners have available this year. Remember, membership in the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association (PMCGA) automatically makes you a member in the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA).

Bylaw Changes Made By PMCGA Board

Greg Roth
Penn State Agronomy
Associate Professor

The PMCGA board of directors passed a resolution to change the bylaws of the association at their November meeting.

The purpose of this bylaws change was to revise the procedure for electing new members to the board of directors.

Rules were changed as follows:

Article VI. Section 2. From: Election of Directors shall be accomplished by mail ballot sent to all eligible members prior to the Annual Meeting. To: Election of Directors shall be accomplished by all eligible members at the Annual Meeting.

Two other changes to the bylaws were made at the same meeting:

Article VII. Section 3. From: Standing Committees. To: Standing Committees. Committees will be appointed as necessary.

Article VIII. Section 1. From: The Annual meeting of the Association shall be called in conjunction with the Annual Awards Presentation at the Pennsylvania State Farm Show. To: The Annual meeting of the Association shall be called in conjunction with the Annual Awards Presentation at the Annual Corn and Soybean Conference.

Association members with comments or questions regarding the change in bylaws should consult with President Dan Wolf at P.O. Box 304, State College, PA 16802.

Growers: Believe In Conventional Agriculture, Educate Others

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Dennis Avery thinks that too many Americans don't believe in the successful, conventional farmer.

According to Avery, the American public likes the organic, small farmers. They don't trust commercial, successful operators who produce more food successfully than any other farmers in the world.

While Asia continues to grow in population, they continue to prosper from Western goods and technology. Along with that comes a reliance on Western quality food — a tremendous, almost limitless market for American products.

Trouble is, according to the director for the Center for Global Food Issues at the Hudson Institute, trade barriers against successful food exports were put in place by the European market and America's own, decades ago, to prevent moving products overseas.

That was the message about 140 growers and agri-industry representatives took home in early February this year at the Pennsylvania Corn and Soybean Conference. The conference was conducted at the Radisson Penn Harris Hotel and Convention Center in Camp Hill.

Already grain producers are farming most of the world's good land, of which America holds the biggest chunk. Asia is still committed to self-sufficiency, meanwhile, although it has suffered "1,000 famines in 2,000 years," he said.

Avery, who directs a think-tank founded in 1961 by futurist Herman Kahn, tries to look far into the future to see where trends will take American agriculture.

Yet this is not the 15th century, with small ships that, if they could make it to China, could be sunk or laden with pestilence, according to Avery. This is an era, Avery noted, that "one fax can get you a half million tons of grain delivered in supertankers."

Slowly, Chinese leaders are beginning to think really seriously about being importers. That could open tremendously large markets for American grain producers.

In the past 50 years, while non-farm trade has expanded 15-fold by the U.S., ag exports have not even doubled.

America continues, according to Avery, to strangle on our own trade barriers that we "wrote and sanctioned" with the signing of the General Agreement on Tariffs in 1947.

And the "flap" over GMOs, according to Avery, is simply an effort by Europe to protect their own farm subsidies. They oppose measures that would raise subsidy cost and their surplus disposal problem.

The GMO controversy flourishes even when there is absolutely no evidence of danger, according to Avery.

And science is on the edge of really pushing critical GMO technology, Avery noted. Already there is work on virus-free sweet potatoes with 40 percent more yield, waiting permission for field trials.

The whole GMO industry has probably lost upward of $20 billion "thanks to lies," said Avery, "by people who said they were doing it for 'the environment.'"

And the West is still looking for the "first victim of pesticide residues," he said.

All the while, second and third world countries want biotech crops, and along with that, more food and food security.

Here at home, people need to learn about the truths regarding organic farming. Avery, a recent guest of the ABC TV news documentary program "20/20," was interviewed by John Stossel of the show about the myths of the "safety" of organic food.

Avery noted that a significant danger from E.coli bacterial contamination exists — which has killed thousands of people — when manure is inappropriately managed on vegetable farms. That adds up to 76 million cases of foodborne illnesses, so far, and 5,000 deaths.

Yet America, noted Avery, continues to believe organic produce is the way to go, while deriding conventional agriculture.

"Ladies and gentlemen, you are in the fight of your lives," Avery told the producers. "People who push organic food are trying to push you out of business."

The environmentalists want the "famine predictions to come true," he said.

The key is to talk to city people "like to have never done before," he said, about the importance of scientifically proven modern production agriculture. If producers don't take on the job of education, "you're going to lose and lose big time," he said.

STARTER FERTILIZER RESEARCH UPDATE

Greg Roth
Penn State Agronomy
Associate Professor

As part of our contribution to a regional cropping systems project sponsored by the Foundation for Agronomic Research, we have been evaluating various liquid starter fertilizers for corn.

We compared five alternatives to two fairly common programs: 10-30-0 and 10-30-10 per acre on high P testing soils. Three of the alternatives were higher N starters consisting of UAN and a UAN/10-34-0 blend to give us a 50-0-0, 50-30-0, and a 30-30-0 treatment. Another alternative was a 30-30-0-10S program that was composed of 10-34-0 and 8-0-0-9. The last alternative was not to use any starter.

This year we conducted two trials, one in Centre County and one near Hershey in Dauphin County. Both trials were notilled into soybean stubble.

The results of both trials were different. At Centre County, there was little consistent visual differences among the treatments in height or color. The best yields in this trial (140 bushels per acre) occurred with either no starter or 10-30-10. At Hershey, three of the starters (30-30-0-10S, 10-30-0, and 10-30-10) resulted in slightly taller and darker green corn.

At harvest yield differences were not significantly different, but these three had the highest yields. We did not see any stand reduction in either trial.

The take-home message — starter responses on high P soils is not that great, especially in a warm dry season. We also did not see much benefit of the higher N starters at either site. These starters have been found to be advantageous on high P soils in several other studies in other states.

Still other research seems to suggest the need for K is most critical even on high testing soils. Our results tend to support the latter. We plan on continuing our effort again next year.

We also looked at how hybrids respond to starter fertilizer again this year.

Last year we found that three of the six hybrids we evaluated responded to starter and the other three did not. This is similar to what a Kansas State University researcher has found for the last three years. This year we found yield differences to starter that were generally similar to last year with the same hybrids tending to show higher yields with starter. This year, though, with all the drought stress, our yield differences were not different statistically. We'll continue this research again next year.

Learn to Recognize Corn Seedling Disease

Gary Munkvold,
Extension Plant Pathologist
Iowa State University

The first few weeks after planting are a crucial time to evaluate the condition of corn stands and determine the success of stand establishment. Corn seedling diseases are one of the problems that can reduce your plant population, sometimes to the point that replanting is necessary.

When a stand establishment problem occurs, it is important to be able to distinguish whether the problem is due to diseases, insects, herbicide injury, soil compaction, or some other cause. This will determine what action you can take to prevent recurrence of the problem.

Seedling diseases in corn are caused by fungi, some of which are soilborne, some seedborne. The most common are phythium, fusarium, and penicillium, but a number of other fungi can be involved. Some will rot seeds before they germinate; in other cases, the seeds germinate but fail to emerge, or they emerge and quickly die. If the seed germinates and the seedling is infected, there will be some brown discoloration on the mesocotyl, primary roots, and/or nodal roots. The tissue may appear dark and slimy or dry and shriveled. It is sometimes possible to tell which fungus is the culprit, based on symptoms or presence of spores. However, it is not crucial to determine the specific fungus involved in corn because management options are essentially the same for any seedling disease.

It is important to determine whether your problem originates from disease as opposed to herbicide injury, insect damage, or other cause. Always look for evidence of insect feeding or, if a herbicide is suspected, look for abnormal plant development.

Seedling diseases tend to occur when soil conditions are cool and wet, and emergence is delayed. Seedlings that take a long time to emerge are easy targets for fungal infection. When poor stands occur in patches, especially in an area of the field that is low or poorly drained, fungi are likely to be involved. Because fungi are not uniformly distributed in soil, it is not unusual to see a healthy seedling directly adjacent to a dead seedling. These are not the patterns expected for herbicide injury.

To prevent corn seedling diseases, use high-quality, fungicide-treated seed. Plant when soil temperature is above 50 degrees F and soil moisture is adequate but not excessive. Be sure that planting depth is not too deep, and that you are getting good seed-to-soil contact. Crop rotation can be helpful to reduce populations of the pathogens, although many fungi that cause these diseases can infect both corn and soybeans. Seedling diseases can be worse when corn follows corn because of higher soil moisture and lower temperature. This effect can be more noticeable under heavy residue conditions.

Planter-box treatments are not necessary to prevent fungal infection of corn seeds and seedlings if the seed has already been commercially treated. Additional fungicide is not likely to provide much benefit. If insects are believed to be a problem, a planter-box treatment may be beneficial.

On The Mark, Get Set, Grow!

The 6100 Series Rigid And Vertical Fold Planters.

Precision farming starts with precision seed placement. And that's exactly what you'll get with the White 6100 Series planters. Our pull-type planters feature an exclusive air-metering system that's designed to singulate every seed. Its low air pressure, edge-drop seed discs and short, 18" seed drop ensure precise seed placement for maximum germination.

Adaptable To Any Tillage Situation.
Our 4, 6, 8 and 12 row planters have the flexibility to meet most tillage practices both now and in the future. They're built rugged with a massive 7" x 7" frame and strong, welded-tongue design to handle the demands of heavy residue. Add a 6900 splitter attachment for interplant capability.

This season get the planter that places each seed where it'll grow the best — and perform the best. Stop by your AGCO® White Planter dealer today.

Five-Acre Corn Club Announces Winners

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Winners of the Pennsylvania Five-Acre Corn Club contest were announced here in early February during the Pennsylvania Corn and Soybean Conference at the Radisson Penn Harris Hotel.

Notable among the winners were many from the western counties of Pennsylvania, including Fayette, Clarion, Beaver, and Mercer.

In the 1997-1999 three-year average awards category, in shelled grain class regular harvest size, David C. Hileman, Tyrone, won first place and harvested an average of 172.2 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3335, Pioneer 33G26, and Pioneer 33VO8 varieties. Second place went to Albert Ferens, Dunbar, for an average of 158.2 bushels per acre using Agway 657 and 767. Third place went to Herman Manbeck, Womelsdorf, for an average of 151.8 bushels per acre using Pioneer 33Y09 and 33Y18.

In the shelled grain, 3-acre plus harvest size, first place went to Carl T. Shaffer, Mifflinville, for an average of 178.1 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3260. Second place went to Lee Spangler, Mifflinburg, for an average of 176.2 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3335 and 33Y09. Third place went to Nelson Beam, Elverson, for an average of 171.2 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3394, 33V08, and 33A14.

In the ear corn class three-year average awards, regular harvest size, first place went to Michael Glenn, Big Cove Tannery, for an average of 175.8 bushels per acre using Ciba Max454 and Pioneer 3217 varieties. Second place went to Jeffrey Reed, Emporium, for an average of 167.6 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3905 and 3893. Third place went to Sandy Ridge Farms, Big Cove Tannery, for an average yield of 164.2 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3437, 37M81, and 35N05.

In the shelled grain class, regular harvest size, first place went to Chris Pilgrim, Fredonia, for a yield of 201.8 bushels per acre using Pioneer 34G81 at a plant population of 26,385. Second place went to Norman Jodikinos, Clinton, for a yield of 187.8 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3394 with a population of 26,078 plants per acre. Third place went to Elder Vogel, Rochester, for a yield of 173.6 bushels per acre using Hytest BH4612 at a plant population of 22,371.

In the shelled grain class, 3-acre plus harvest size, first place went to Robert E. More, Montgomery, for a yield of 218.3 bushels per acre using Pioneer 33A14 at a plant population of 29,206. Second place went to D. Richard Snyder, Montoursville, for a yield of 205.3 bushels per acre using Pioneer 33A14 at a plant population of 28,010. Third place went to Michel P. Wilcox, Carlton, for a yield of 199.2 bushels per acre using Pioneer 36B08 at a plant population of 29,751.

In the ear corn class, hand harvest, first place went to Jeffrey E. Reed, Emporium, for a yield of 204.3 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3893 at a plant population of 23,282. Second place went to Sandy Ridge Farms, Shippenville, for a yield of 196.8 bushels per acre using Pioneer 35N05 at a plant population of 31,574. Third place was awarded to Wayne Freeman, Elliotsburg, for a yield of 194.3 bushels per acre using NC+5878B at a plant population of 26,199.

There were less than five entries in the machine harvest class in 1999, so no awards were made.

1999 PENNSYLVANIA CORN CLUB SUMMARY

The 1999 season was a challenging one for many producers Many participants did not enter the club this year and our entrants were down significantly Nevertheless, despite the drought conditions, we were able to document some good yields around the state. You'll notice our winners are scattered more than in some years. Also, grain moistures were lower than usual and barren plant counts were higher

Take a few minutes and review the crop management of the champions. I think you'll find that they are doing a great job of managing their crops and this is part of the reason for their success. Also, review the cultural practice summary and you will see the trends in inputs and cultural practices that corn club members are using

Thanks to everyone who contributed to this effort- producers, extension agents, crop consultants, and seedsmen

Greg W Roth

Leading Researchers Take Issue Regarding Genetically Engineered Crops

Two prominent entomologists, including one from Cornell University, have warned that recent studies on the effects of genetically engineered crops have distorted the debate about engineered crops and that this could have "profound consequences" for science and public policy.

One study was led by Cornell Assistant Entomology Professor John Losey suggesting that Bt corn pollen can kill monarch butterfly larvae. In the article, "False Reports and the Ears of Man," Cornell Entomology Professor Anthony M. Shelton and University of Adelaide, Australia, Professor Richard T. Roush urge that the public should not be swayed "by laboratory reports that, when looked at with a critical eye, may not have any reality in the field even in the laboratory."

Shelton and Roush question whether the cornell monarch butterfly study was realistic.

"If I went to a movie and bought a hundred pounds of salted popcorn, because I liked salted popcorn, and then I ate the salted popcorn all at once, I'd probably die. Eating that much salted popcorn simply is not a real-world situation. But if I died, it may be reported that salted popcorn was lethal," Shelton said in an interview.

Grain Producers Offered Guidelines For Genetically Modified Crops

With resistance to products containing genetically modified ingredients in Europe and Asia rising in recent weeks, growers need to focus on how to manage the marketing of their grain.

According to Dr. Neil E. Harl, professor of agriculture and economics at Iowa State University, it's especially critical for those producing non-biotech varieties.

Here's what producers can realistically do:

- State that no seed represented by the seed company as biotech seed was planted.
- State that seed representative by the seed company as conventional seed was planted.
- State that care was taken in avoiding contamination in bins, augers and the combine.

Here's what producers should be careful not to do:

- State that the crop in question has no biotech germplasm.
- State that no contamination has occurred from mechanical handling and storage of the crop.
- State that no contamination has occurred from pollen drift.

Biotech Produces Golden Rice

Greg Roth
Penn State Agronomy Associate Professor

In the January 14, 2000 edition of Science magazine, a report by X. Ye et and others described the development of rice plants using biotechnology that accumulate beta carotene (Vitamin A) in the grain.

This development of "golden rice" is significant because more than half of the world's population eat rice daily and rice is a poor source of many minerals and vitamins. In Southeast Asia, for example, approximately 70 percent of the children under five suffer from vitamin A deficiency. UNICEF (United Nations Children's Fund) predicts that improved vitamin A could prevent 1 to 2 million child death each year.

The rice was developed by inserting three genes that encode for three different enzymes that are necessary for the biosynthesis of beta-carotene in the endosperm. Variety development and field testing remain to be completed, but if the testing is successful, this could be a major development similar to the green revolution.

The Rockefeller Foundation, the Swiss Federal Institute of Technology, and the European Community Biotech Program funded this work. Since these are public sources of funding, the rice should be freely available to farmers who need it most.

If this program is successful, it will be a major boost to the proponents of biotechnology, because it demonstrates the potential of the technology to address consumer problems, even for the less developed countries.

Capitol Region Agronomy Team Report

CORN SILAGE HYBRID SELECTION

Paul Craig
Capital Region Extension Agronomy Team
Dauphin County Cooperative Extension

Selecting which corn hybrids to plant for corn silage production is one of the most important management decisions affecting the economics of corn silage production. Although many silage producers simply plant many high grain yielding corn hybrids and then select fields to meet their silage needs at harvest time, more dairy producers and their nutritionists are basing silage variety selection on the nutritional needs of their herds.

Corn hybrids are typically referred to as grain type, silage type, or dual purpose. Silage types are generally selected for high forage yields, high digestibility, low fiber levels, and high stover digestibility. The best silage types have high grain yields with a grain starch content that is also highly digestible. When making silage hybrid selection, start by grouping hybrids that are adapted to your area in terms of maturity, disease and insect resistance, drought tolerance, and other agronomic characteristics. Next, discuss with your nutritionist what your forage needs are. Then ask your seed dealers to explain to you which of their hybrids should be selected for your silage production.

Dr. Michael Allen, Michigan State University, has been investigating corn hybrids for silage production for many years. He believes that although many producers use grain yield as the basis for selecting a corn silage variety, this is not a good selection criteria. Grain yield, Allen has found, is not related to forage quality and is not highly related to forage yield either. Allen has found that although many excellent "dual purpose" corn hybrids exist, certain characteristics that make an excellent grain hybrid such as fast kernel drying and hard kernel texture are undesirable for silage production because they reduce the digestibility of starch in the grain. Hard dry kernels resist digestion and reduce the energy content of the silage crop. Therefore serious consideration should be made to select hybrids for grain and silage separately.

Forage quality is a complex term. If two corn silages are compared on the same farm, they might differ in moisture content, fermentation, stability, particle size, fiber content, grain hardiness, fiber digestibility, and protein content. Many of these factors are dependent on management or environmental conditions and not related to genetics of the hybrid. Moisture content at harvest affects fermentation, which affects digestibility and feed value. Particle size also affects fermentation quality and feeding quality.

The preferred way to determine the value of a forage crop is to value the nutritional components in the forage based on the market prices of other feeds. Specifically, corn silage can be based on the price of corn, soybean meal, and legume hay. Differences in forage value calculated in this way reflect additional amounts of grain and digestibility required to equate quality differences of the forages. Your nutritionist should be able to help you value your corn silage.

In many ways, the tradeoff of tonnage for higher quality may be acceptable if the quality factors affect animal performance. Animals fed high forage diets should benefit most from hybrids with low NDF and high NDF digestibility. High-producing animals consuming higher amounts of grain, such as lactating dairy cows, should benefit most from hybrids with higher NDF digestibility. All hybrids for silage should have high starch digestibility. Until better lab analysis is available for more valid comparison, select corn hybrids for silage production with soft texture and slow kernel drying relative to stover dry down.

As the 2000 planting season approaches, only eight weeks from now, silage growers should reflect on management decisions for optimum silage production. Genetics is only one piece of the production process. Other management practices such as date of planting, populations, fertility, and pest control will also affect yield and quality factors.

Feeding quality silage in November begins with planning in February. Review with your agronomy service provider or county agent or refer to the 2000 Penn State Agronomy Guide for the latest recommendations for corn silage production.

Don't allow your potential for high quality feed this fall to begin the growing season with less than optimum production potential.

Committee Appointed For NCGA CEO Search

The NCGA Corn Board has appointed a search committee to find a candidate to replace Chris Wehrman as executive vice president and CEO after her departure from NCGA.

On Feb. 4, Wehrman announced her planned departure before Sept. 30. Committee members are Lynn Jensen (chair), Lake Preston, S.D. NCGA president; Lee Klein, Battle Creek, Neb, NCGA president-elect; Roger Pine, Lawrence, Kan., chairman of the board; Bill Northey, Spirit Lake, Iowa, past president; Leon Corzine, Assumption, Ill, Illinois Corn Growers Association president; Waren Formo, Granite Falls, Minn., Minnesota Corn Growers Association treasurer; Brent Porteus, Coshocton, Ohio, Ohio Corn Marketing Program treasurer; Craig Floss (ex-officio/non-voting member), Des Moines, Iowa, Iowa Corn Growers Association/Iowa Corn Promotion Board CEO; and Neil Strong (ex-officio/non-voting member), Downers Grove, Ill., Novartis Crop Protection, Inc. director, agricultural relations.

Upon Wehrman's announcement, Jensen said the Corn Board appreciates the ample notice Wehrman gave of her future intentions. He noted that Wehrman will remain in the position with full authority and accountability for the staff management of the organization until her departure.

Jensen said that since joining NCGA in October 1994, Wehrman's leadership has broadened the scope and breadth of NCGA accomplishments on issues and programs addressed on behalf of member states and corn growers. In this period, through corn grower initiatives and her staff leadership, NCGA has reorganized the association structure and integrated NCGA presence throughout the corn and agricultural industries.

"Chris has contributed immensely to the livelihood and future of corn growers and agricultural interests, and we thank her for her dedicated service," Jensen said.

NCGA Offers Statement On Biotechnology

ST. LOUIS, Mo.–The following is position of the National Corn Growers Association on the availability and use of biotechnology for U.S. agriculture.

Biotechnology and Bushels

Farmers are accustomed to assuming and managing risk. However, few cropping seasons have appeared as risky as the 2000 season because of concerns about the production and marketing of biotech corn.

While farmers recognize the safety, benefits, and potential of biotechnology, we also recognize that activist organizations have clouded the domestic and international acceptance of biotech products. This has created uncertainty and questions for everyone who grows, markets, and handles corn. However, it must be emphasized that there have been no problems of food safety or quality with any biotech corn product.

National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) advocates the continued availability of federally regulated and approved seed and crops produced through biotechnology. NCGA supports the science-based regulatory process and stands behind the system that approves these new tools for agriculture and food production.

NCGA recognizes that the use of these biotech products is an individual decision, based upon the benefits of agronomic traits, such as higher yields from pest control that a hybrid may offer and the marketing options available for that hybrid.

For 2000, there is the risk that some markets may change between planting and harvest. Some processors and grain companies could change acceptance policies or may change delivery points for hybrids considered conventional, those approved for export to the European Union (EU), and those not yet approved for export to the EU. Farmers will need to actively and aggressively track the marketing opportunities available throughout the 2000 growing season.

Know Before You Grow

NCGA recommends that as you select hybrids you do so with the full knowledge of whether the number is conventional, one approved for EU export, or one not yet approved for EU export.

The NCGA website, www.ncga.com, lists the hybrids not yet approved for EU export. In 1999, less than 5 percent of the U.S. corn crop came from hybrids not yet approved for European export.

NCGA recommends that growers read their grower agreements before planting and are fully aware of the requirements of these agreements. It is vital that hybrids awaiting EU approval are kept out of export and processing channels.

Know Where to Go

If you grow hybrids not yet approved for export to the EU, NCGA urges you to funnel these hybrids into one of three markets. Those markets are (1) to feed these hybrids in your own livestock rations, (2) to sell into domestic livestock feeding channels or (3) sell to elevators accepting grain not yet approved for EU export. Visit the American Seed Trade Association website by its link through the NCGA website or at http://asta.farmprogress.com for more information about the grain facilities accepting hybrids not yet approved for export to the EU.

This marketing discipline will ensure the integrity of the U.S. grain supply and will demonstrate the respect U.S. corn farmers have for the desires and preferences of our customers.

Insect Resistance Management

To prevent development of European corn borer resistance to Bt, farmers must follow the requirement, founded upon science-based regulatory agency review and upon advice from industry, to plant a 20 percent refuge of non-Bt hybrids in the Corn Belt and a 50 percent refuge in the Cotton Belt.

Voluntary Labeling

Although food safety is not the issue, NCGA policy supports consumer choice through standards for goods that do not contain products of biotechnology. Consistent with current U.S. Food and Drug Administration regulation, NCGA supports voluntary labeling for foods and agricultural products that identifies attributes that are important to consumers and that accurately conveys information without being misleading. NCGA believes labeling of nonbiotech products provides a framework for consumer protection and choice.

In contrast to the voluntary labeling supported by NCGA, the European Union, Japan, South Korea, Australia and New Zealand have enacted mandatory food labeling to identify biotech ingredients. Some food manufacturers and retailers are reacting to these new labeling requirements that claim to be "free" of biotech material. The desire to market nonbiotech food will increase demand for identity-preserved, conventional corn and for substitute food ingredients.

Segregation

Some grain handlers and processors have recommended segregating conventional and biotech hybrids. Segregation and the more management-intensive iden-

New Board Members

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.)–The Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association (PMCGA) conducted an election for board members at the recent Pennsylvania Corn and Soybean Conference.

Elected to the board for a three-year term in the producer category were Chris Kimmel, Armstrong County; Jeffrey Werner, Lebanon County; and D. Richard Snyder, Lycoming County.

The industry representative elected to the board was Mike Kuhns of Lewisburg. Elected to the board for the education category was Thomas Murphy of Trout Run, Lycoming County. Elections were conducted for the first time at the annual meeting this year.

Code Blue For Old Man River, Says NCGA

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Citing imminent losses in domestic and export corn markets, coupled with exorbitant transportation costs, National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) Corn Board member Tim Burrack of Arlington, Iowa, told the Mississippi River Caucus in Washington, D.C. that the future of agriculture rests on drastically needed improvements along the Mississippi and Illinois rivers.

Burrack noted that the future financial success of corn growers throughout the nation is directly tied to the Mississippi and Illinois river system. Subsequently, infrastructure improvements are a top priority for NCGA – namely the doubling the 600-foot lock chambers at Mississippi River Lock and Dam 25, 24, 22, 20 and 21 and LaGrange and Peoria locks on the Illinois River. To further improve the river's efficiency, NCGA is pushing for the extension of guidewalls at the Mississippi Lock and Dam 18-14.

"If we are unable to move agricultural products in an efficient manner, the United States will become less and less competitive in export markets and we will lose domestic markets as well," Burrack said. "Unless we make the improvements along the river, U.S. agriculture will pay the price."

Without continued investments in the transportation infrastructure, he said, U.S. farmers are being placed at a severe disadvantage as foreign countries increase their commitment to developing their agricultural export markets.

For the past six years, NCGA has watched the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers conduct the $40 million upper Mississippi-Illinois Waterway Navigation Study and has attempted to be fully engaged in the study process every step of the way.

"However, our opinion of this process — a true watershed — has eroded from cautious optimism to having lost all faith in the study," said Burrack. "Perhaps we were naive in thinking that this study would confirm the obvious; that the majority of locks are outdated, under capacity and under maintained, and in dire need of improvement. Instead, we have seen the Corps produce one implausible theorem after another."

He further illustrated NCGA's frustration by noting that the Corps claims that the rail rates will not rise, even though they did not study capacity constraints at the ports; the Corps has decided that advances currently being made in biotechnology will not lead to beyond trend line yield increases; the Corps has not taken into account what U.S. competitors are doing to strengthen their export positions; and the Corps is indicating that the environmental benefits of river transportation will not be accounted for properly.

"If this were not enough, they (the Corps of Engineers) have spent the last year trying to determine the elasticity of demand for barge transportation, and quite frankly, they blew it," Burrack said.

He explained that Iowa is the second largest shipper of corn and soybeans on the Mississippi and Illinois rivers that Iowa farmers shipped an average of 203 million bushels of corn and 66 million bushels of soybeans on the Mississippi River every year during the 1990s. In addition, a large volume of Iowa grain is railed or trucked to the Illinois River for shipment. For corn, the Mississippi shipments equal more than one of every eight rows grown in Iowa, and in 1997, corn shipments were worth more than $340 million.

tity preservation require additional handling, which may pose challenges for farmers and elevator managers during harvest.

NCGA maintains that users who prefer guaranteed conventional corn must be prepared to pay for the added management costs and equipment expenses required to segregate it.

NCGA will continue to work closely with all sectors of agriculture and with the government agencies that regulate biotechnology and that promote the export of U.S. crops. NCGA will continue to provide farmers with the information necessary to evaluate their markets. Furthermore, NCGA will insist that technology companies provide farmers with timely, accurate information and the choice to buy the best hybrids either as conventional seed or as those enhanced through biotechnology.

Pennsylvania Alternate Dairy Princess Values Growing Up On Farm

JAYNE SEBRIGHT
Lancaster Farming Staff

WATTSBURG (Erie Co.) — Although 18-year-old Amanda Gilkinson may not always like cutting after-school fun short to do evening chores, she believes that the experiences she has had on her parent's dairy farm more than make up for the things she missed because of the farm.

"Growing up on a farm has taught me not to take things for granted," said Amanda. "It's taught me a different set of values than most people my age have. It has also opened so many opportunities to me."

One of the opportunities living on a dairy farm opened up to Amanda was the chance to become the 1999-2000 Pennsylvania Alternate Dairy Princess.

"Ever since I was a little girl, I wanted to be dairy princess," said Amanda. "My friends and I would always go to the pageants and watch the newest dairy princess in awe."

Amanda comes from a 75-head dairy farm in Erie County, just three miles from New York. Her parents, Ralph and Michele, both work on the farm, which is called MI-RA-CREST.

Amanda's responsibilities on the farm include taking care of the calves and helping with other chores when she is needed. She also helps milk when her father, who serves on both the Pennsylvania DHIA and Genex Board of Directors, is away at meetings.

Amanda's parents both grew up on dairy farms and knew that the farm was the only place where they wanted to raise Amanda and her 13-year-old brother Stephen.

"Being with my family is my favorite part of growing up on a farm," said Amanda. "I always felt fortunate to have both of my parents around all of the time."

Both Ralph and Michele come from large families. Ralph has eleven brothers and sisters. All but one of them live on dairy farms. Michele has seven brothers and sisters with one living on a farm. Amanda's cousin Wendy Gilkinson was Warren County Dairy Princess in 1997.

"We always try to get together with both families over the holidays," said Amanda. "We can all fit in one house, but not in one room."

Amanda's dream came true last September when she was crowned Pennsylvania Alternate Dairy Princess. "I never expected to be crowned a state alternate," said Amanda. "My goal was just to be in the top seven finalists."

Amanda has had lots of coaching in being state royalty. While she is the first state alternate from Erie County, two out of the last four Pennsylvania Dairy Princesses — Rhonda Keiklak and Nicole Meabon — have come from Erie.

"Rhonda was at my house the night before I left for the state pageant, making me do my skit, going through my clothes, and helping me get ready," said Amanda. "Nicki and I keep in touch through email and compare notes on princess activities."

Although she was nervouse about being in the top seven, Amanda was most nervous about giving her speech during the pageant. She was one of two winners in the speech category and had to give her speech in front of the coronation audience. Her speech was about growing up on a dairy farm.

Amanda has enjoyed meeting all of the people she has met through being both Erie County and Pennsylvania Alternate Dairy Princess. "Everyone has something different that's interesting about them."

On the county level, Amanda has already fulfilled most of the requirements for the second level incentive that is awarded to princesses at the end of the year. She has done 37 school promotions, along with many school promotions, newspaper articles, and special events. She has one dairy maid in her county who helps with the promotions.

On the state level, she has attended many banquets, spent countless hours at the Pennsylvania Farm Show, and spoke to several farm groups on behalf of the dairy princess program. Last weekend she helped at the Book and the Cook Fair in Philadelphia.

Amanda enjoys fulfilling the school promotions and non-farm presentation requirements of her reign the most.

"When you go and talk to people who aren't from farms or to young children, you really walk out of there feeling like you've taught them something that they didn't know before," said Amanda.

According to Amanda, the biggest challenge of being Pennsylvania Alternate Dairy Princess is balancing her dairy princess activities with school and extracurricular activities. She has missed 30 days of school so far but feels fortunate because her teachers are very supportive of her reign.

Amanda is a senior at Seneca High School in Wattsburg. She is the student council president and the District I student council president. She belongs to the National Honor Society, plays volleyball, and runs track. She also serves as the contact person for the Pennsylvania Free Enterprise, a weeklong session teaching sophomores and juniors about running their own business.

Outside of school, Amanda is a very active eleventh-year member in her local 4-H dairy club. She has attended almost every 4-H activity imaginable, including the 1999 National 4-H Conference in Atlanta, Georgia.

Amanda was one of 13 delegates selected to attend the national conference. People from all over attended the conference, including delegates from Hawaii, Japan, and Alaska.

"We spent the week after Thanksgiving at the conference, and we had a blast," said Amanda. "I got to be on CNN's Talk Back Live show and saw the Olympic stadium in Atlanta."

Amanda has been the president of her 4-H dairy club, the Dairy Dippers, for the last five years. But this year she stepped down to serve as vice president. She is also on the teen council and participated in dairy bowl for Warren County in 1999.

Owning four 4-H animals, Amanda shows at local fairs, the 4-H round-up, and district 4-H shows. She doesn't attend the larger shows in the state, but she is usually pleased with how her dairy animals place locally.

Amanda is very active in the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives (PCC). In 1997 she started out in PCC by attending the local meeting, then went to Shippensburg for the state conference, and was chosen as a state finalist to attend the 1998 national conference held in California.

In 1999 Amanda was one of six teens asked to come back to the state conference as scholar staff. "I helped plan the week's activities and served as co-chair and an instructor for the week-long event," said Amanda.

Amanda is also a member of the St. Methias Catholic Church in New York. Next year, she plans to attend the Pennsylvania State University, majoring in agriculture economics.

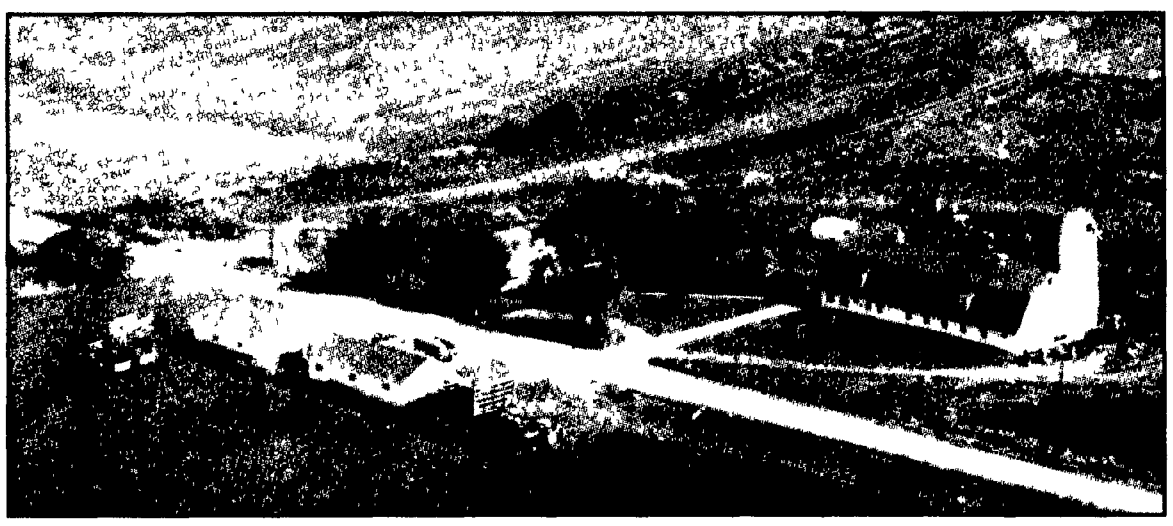
While balancing her other activities with her dairy princess responsibilities is challenging, Amanda wouldn't give it up for anything. "Being a dairy princess is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity."

She attributes her dairy princess reign to helping her become more outgoing. "I am not afraid to try something new," said Amanda. "I also learned how to get along with people better."

(Turn to Page B4)

Amanda and her dad Ralph traveled down to State College last week for the Pennsylvania DHIA annual banquet. Ralph serves as a member of the Pennsylvania DHIA Board of Directors, while Amanda represented state dairy royalty at the banquet.

Amanda has four 4-H projects that she shows at local fairs and 4-H shows. Here she is with her Holstein cow, Erin.



Amanda lives her family on a 200-acre farm in Wattsburg, where they have 75 dairy animals. Her parents Ralph and Michele knew that a farm was the best place to raise their children.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

We've been homebound for most of the winter. Now my husband has progressed to using just a cane after his hip operation. During this time he has had one faithful visitor. This man has health problems of his own, and they can understand each other's troubles.

My husband tells me that he not only knew this older man's parents but even his grandfather. You see, when we were first married he augmented our income by selling potatoes at Leesport in Berks County. He also sold potato chips there every week while I stayed home with the little ones. Here is where he met the older folks.

This week we were treated to a meal out by my sister and her husband. The restaurant was in a newly-built mall and was so well patronized that we had to stand outside in the cold for a bit. There were hundreds of people in this buffet-style restaurant. The variety of food displayed was endless but I surely would not want to eat there regularly. I prefer a meat, potatoes and a vegetable. But, I admit that there is always a dessert or two at our table.

My daughter and her son were here last weekend, and she does not approve of my serving dessert after each meal. I guess some of us like to eat the cherry cobbler and dropped doughnuts that I make.

One day our daughter in Atlanta phoned to say her family was going to visit us the first week in April. The next day our son from Atlanta phoned to say his family would be visiting the first week in April. They have no school at that time.

I'll bet the grandchildren will be glad for my array of desserts.

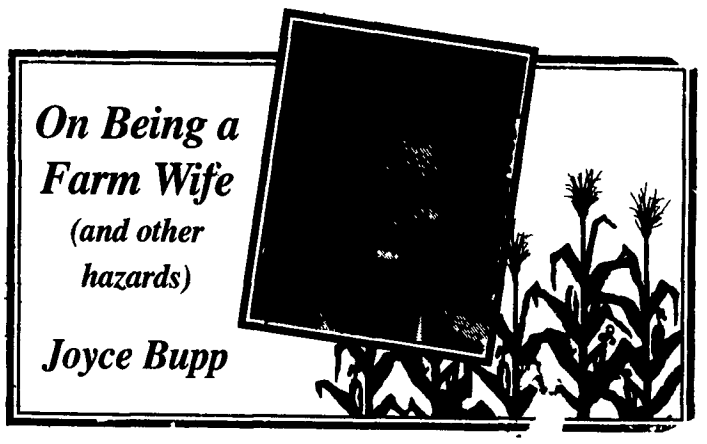
RED WING SHOES®

Made in U.S.A.



It works.

The system works.

And several thousand farmland owners here in York County are tickled pink about it.

Because, after a couple of years of protesting a real estate reassessment and its resulting tax hikes on land with no improvements, there appears to be some relief in sight.

And we can gratefully thank a handful of our farm leaders, especially current and past county Farm Bureau presidents Doug Kilgore and Bill Buser, and their boards of farmer-directors. It was they who really grabbed hold of the reins of this issue and helped guide it to what landowners can only see as a successful conclusion.

The end result?

Lower real estate taxes on land used to help feed the nation.

What really "tripped their trigger," enough for thousands of farmers and open land owners to file tax protests and voluntarily contribute funds toward addressing the increases, was across-the-board higher values put on farmland, with no consideration given to soil type or productivity.

Also raising the collective landowner ire was a high valuation on farm houses, which are an integral part of a farm. What farmer is likely to sell the farmhouse, which usually sits in the midst of, or very near, production-related buildings, to someone to move into, absent of buying the rest of the farm? So how much extra value is a house which is basically worth almost nothing unless part of the package?

This welcome and highly-sensible decision to re-evaluate farmland taxation is a bright spot in an otherwise somber financial picture for the average-sized "family farm" in York County. (Whatever a "family farm" means is tenuous, at best, when relating to size. We have friends who operate "family" dairy farms ranging from 50-cow herds nearby to Florida and California ones with upwards of 10,000 milking cows each).

On our own farm, the reassessment which was completed a couple of years ago, jacked up our real state tax 43 percent. Yep, 43 percent. That, mind you, on land which is producing crops and milk which are currently valued at 20-year lows. And we don't even talk about the sudden escalation in price of the considerable volumes of diesel fuel to produce it.

We've beaten this drum repeatedly, but it's worth banging on one more time: land kept in agriculture does not demand even close to the volume of municipal services (read, tax $$$) as do commercial or residential uses. Crop acreage doesn't generate tons of landfill trash, create more roads which need to be kept paved, plowed and patched, demand curbing, sewer, water, street lights or gas lines. It doesn't generate the need to build more schools or playgrounds or community centers or mass transit systems or traffic lights or hire lots of extra policemen.

Crop acreage does produce oxygen for us to breath, soaks up moisture which helps restore the water tables, helps to provide food and cover for wildlife and plays a large role in maintaining that vital "open space" which most people feel is a necessary part of quality of life.

Not to forget its importance in feeding our people so efficiently that it takes less than one percent of us to feed the other 99 percent.

Could you really grow and harvest and grind the wheat for the bread and pasta you ate today? Could you milk and process and age the cheese on the pizza you enjoyed the other evening? Could you grow in your backyard, or back porch, the variety of fresh vegetables in that salad you had for lunch yesterday.

Sure you could. But do you want to? Revaluing our taxation won't save every acre of farmland that helps produce our dinners. But it may help a bit in the overall picture.

Death and taxes may be certain.

But it's satisfying that–by pulling together–we could have a modifying effect on at least use of them.

Craft Show

RUTGERS, N.J.–The Seventh Annual Breath of Spring Craft Show is scheduled for March 18, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Hunterdon County Extension Center on Route 31 north of Flemington. Admission is $1.

This show is made up of excellent crafters with handmade crafts: wood carvings, weaving, folk art, quilts, hand painted lamp shades, American Girl Doll clothes, dried herbs & flora, jewelry, Easter items and much more.

There will be crafts for children to make and a visit from the Easter Bunny. Also available will be a variety of spring plants, baked goods, and a delicious lunch menu.

Growing Up On Farm

Early morning dairy princess events have also helped Amanda become more of a morning person. Normally Amanda needs the first couple of hours she is awake to gradually work into being social.

"When I am at home, nobody bothers me for the first two hours that I am awake," said Amanda. "I don't mind doing things in the morning. I'm just not ready to be social that early."

But being dairy princess has helped her overcome her early-morning shyness.

"It's only when I am away," admits Amanda. "My parents would argue that I am still not a morning person when I am at home."

Amanda joined her state dairy princess team, including Lori Connelly and Rebecca Kilgore, to model 18th century garb during the ladies program at the Pennsylvania Holstein Association annual convention.

Retirement Savings

RUTGERS, N.J.–With 77 million baby boomers inching toward retirement, at perhaps no other time in American history has retirement planning been of such great concern to so many people.

Worksheets and computer software programs can provide estimates of savings required to fund a specific amount of income over an individual's assumed life expectancy. Like all projections, however, they are only as good as the assumptions upon which they are based.

A very important planning factor is retirees' financial goals (e.g., travel) and anticipated lifestyle. Some people can live happily on half of their pre-retirement income while others require 100% (or more) to maintain their lifestyle. There are also a lot of people for whom the commonly-quoted range of 60% to 80% of pre-retirement income is adequate.

Another planning factor is the generosity (or lack thereof) of former employers. Some lucky retirees have generous pensions and free or low-cost employer-paid health coverage. Others have no employer retirement benefits and must pay thousands of dollars annually for supplemental Medigap health coverage.

A third planning factor is selection of retirement housing. An April 1998 article in Worth states that "changes in geography and shelter are great surrogates for a lifetime of investing." In other words, trading down to a smaller home and/or moving to a cheaper area of the country can have as much impact on retirees' well-being in retirement as the amount of money they are able to invest. Not only does someone get to invest the profit from the sale of their home, but their future living costs will likely be lower.

Receipt of an inheritance is another issue to consider. While inheritances should never be used as an excuse to save, they are a potential source of income. They are also difficult to count on due to uncertainties about benefactors' health and longevity. Some adult children are "hedging their bets" by purchasing, and paying premiums for, long-term care insurance for their parents. This lessens the possibility that long-term care costs, like nursing home bills, will dissipate their legacy.

Another planning issue is consideration of post-retirement employment income and Social Security benefits when calculating retirement savings.

Retirement planning is not an exact science. Instead, it involves making the best assumptions possible and planning and saving accordingly. This article has reviewed key planning factors. To determine what you need to save, check the "Ballpark Estimate" at www.asec.org. or contact Rutgers Cooperative Extension for fact sheet 431: "How Much Do I Need To Save For Retirement?"

Healthy Meals Made Simple

Nutritional deficiencies between vitamin C and scurvy and between vitamin D and rickets were connected during the early 1900s.

Since then, the focus has been on how food and substances in food can improve health and potentially protect a person from disease.

Protein found in meats and seafood give energy and promote healthy cells. If you're in a hurry and don't have time to cook meat, tuna is ready-to-eat from the can. Tuna is high in protein and low in fat and calories when compared with other proteins. Not only does tuna add variety to low-fat diets, but also the protein in tuna stabilizes blood sugar levels, keeping appetite under control and energy levels high.

Calcium found in cheese, milk, and other dairy products are best known for its bone building benefits. It's shown to prevent osteoporosis, which is a bone-thinning disease that causes 1.5 million fractures of the hip, spine, and wrist each year.

Calcium is a mineral needed to help keep bones dense and strong. Dairy products, as well as sardines and canned salmon with bones, are good sources of calcium.

Eating cheese is one of the easiest ways to work calcium, protein, and phosphorous into your diet. Cheese provides the same amount of protein as an equal amount of peanut butter.

Two one-ounce slices of American cheese has about as much calcium as an 8-ounce glass of milk.

The vitamins and minerals found in vegetables are shown to reduce the risk of cancer, heart attack, stroke, diabetes, obesity, high blood pressure, osteoporosis, and other health risks.

The Five A Day program encourages people to eat five or more servings of fruits and vegetables daily for better health.

When it comes right down to it, almost every food has nutritional benefits. Depending on individual needs some people need to consume more of some nutrient-dense foods and eat sparingly of others. Choices abound. Today's collection offers ideas for a great start toward total nutrition.

For more information about 5 a Day, visit www.5aday.com. Or to receive additional recipes, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Produce for Better Health Foundation, 5301 Limestone Rd., Suite 101, Wilmington, DE 19808.

CALIFORNIA GOLD TART

60 fat-free cinnamon graham crackers, crushed
2 tablespoons butter, melted
9-ounce package sugar-free instant vanilla pudding
1½ cups nonfat milk
¼ cup dried apricots, thinly sliced
2 fresh plums
2 fresh nectarines
2 fresh peaches
3 tablespoons all-fruit, no sugar jam, melted

Mix crumbs with butter and press into bottom and slightly up sides of removable-bottom 9-inch tart pan. Bake at 375 degrees for 6 minutes or until crisp. Cool. Beat pudding mix with milk, whisking vigorously to blend.

Turn filling into tart pan. Brush jam over cut surfaces of fruit to glaze. Chill until ready to serve (best within 4 hours). To serve, gently slip off pan sides. This lean tart base is delicate, so after cutting wedges, slide each wedge on to dessert plate using wide metal pancake-turner style spatula.

Serves 6.

SLIM STRAWBERRY CHEF'S SALAD

⅔ cup nonfat light sour cream substitute
¼ cup red wine vinegar
2 green onions, sliced
2 to 3 teaspoons hot-sweet mustard
Salt and pepper, to taste
Butter lettuce leaves
2 pint baskets strawberries, steamed
2 cups assorted fresh fruit pieces (grapefruit segments, pineapple chunks, orange and kiwi slices)
8 slices lean turkey or ham
½ cup alfalfa sprouts

To make salad dressing, in small bowl, whisk sour cream substitute, vinegar, onions, and mustard; season with salt and pepper. Set aside. To assemble salad, line four dinner plates with lettuce. Top with fruits, turkey and sprouts, dividing equally. Serve with dressing on the side. Makes 4 servings.

This may look like a contemporary salad, but the recipe is from a 1623 kitchen of the "The English Housewife."

RAISIN ENERGY BITES

4 egg whites
¼ cup sugar
4 teaspoons vegetable oil
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
¾ teaspoon vanilla extract
1⅔ cups plain low-fat granola
1 cup raisins
3 tablespoons toasted wheat germ
3 tablespoons raw sunflower seeds
4 teaspoons sesame seeds

In a large bowl, beat egg whites and sugar with whisk until smooth. Beat in oil, cinnamon, and vanilla extract. Stir in remaining ingredients; blend well.

Generously coat 13x9-inch baking pan with nonstick cooking spray.

Turn raisin mixture into pan; pat to even layer. Bake at 300 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes or until golden brown. Cool 5 minutes in pan. Loosen edges with spatula and invert onto wire rack to cool completely. Cut into four dozen bite-sized pieces.

Snack Mix: Combine Raisin Bites with one or more of the following: dried apricots or dried apples, roasted almonds, peanuts or cashews, or banana chips.

Tip: When there is no time to sit down to breakfast, bag these Raisin Bites for a good breakfast to go.

BAKED APPLES WITH FRESH MINT

4 apples
½ cup raisins
¼ cup brown sugar
1 tablespoon fresh mint, minced
2 teaspoons butter

Core apples and peel off a one-inch strip around the hole on the top of each apple. Place apples in shallow baking dish. Combine raisins, brown sugar, and mint. Fill apples with raisin mixture. Top with raisin filling in each apple with ½ teaspoon butter.

Bake at 350 degrees for about 50 minutes or until apples are tender. Makes 4 servings.

CREAMY FRUIT DIP

8-ounces cream cheese
¾ cup packed brown sugar
1 cup sour cream
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1 cup cold milk
3.4-ounce package instant vanilla pudding mix

In mixing bowl, beat cream cheese and brown sugar until smooth. Add sour cream, vanilla, lemon juice, milk, and pudding mix. Cover and chill at least one hour. Serve as a dip for fruit.

Featured Recipe

Today's recipe comes from Stewart and Carol Mathias, Hummelstown. Stewart was recently named Pennsylvania Beekeeper of the Year.

He is an enthusiastic supporter of beekeeping, which has ancient ties to agriculture. In addition to his own achievements, Mathias's daughter Jill, a former Pennsylvania Honey Queen and American Princess, remains active in the industry and is treasurer of the National Honey Board.

This recipe is one of the family's many favorites using honey. Nutrients are packed in the ingredients that combines seafood, spinach, and honey, which is a natural, unrefined food that contains vitamins, minerals, and antioxidants. Honey is fat-free, cholesterol free, and has no sodium.

Read more about Mathias and the honey and bee industry in the article that appears in this section, and don't forget to try this recipe.

BAKED FLOUNDER WITH SPINACH

1 cup sour cream
2 tablespoons honey
1 tablespoon lemon juice
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon ginger
2 to 3 chopped scallions
1 tablespoon flour
1 package frozen, chopped spinach, thawed, drained
1½pounds flounder fillets or other whitefish
Paprika

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Combine first seven ingredients. Add half the mixture to the spinach and place in bottom of shallow baking dish.

Arrange fillets on top and cover with remaining sour cream mixture. Sprinkle with paprika and bake 20 minutes.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Two local poultry leaders are appearing on WITF-TV, central Pennsylvania's public television station, preparing their favorite dish.

Jim Shirk, assistant vice president for PennAg Poultry Council, and Ann Gehman, who with her husband Mel operates Heritage Poultry Association, will participate in a live cooking marathon today from 2 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. The cooking marathon will be rebroadcast on Thursday March 9 at 8 p.m.

"C is for Chicken" will show central Pennsylvanias how to prepare chicken recipes, from chicken potpie to chicken cordon bleu.

Shirk will prepare Chicken Potpie, an authentic Old Order Mennonite recipe handed down from his side of the family.

Gehman will prepare Chicken Wild Rice Salad for the 10th in a series of WITF cooking marathons.

Shirk and Gehman are two among 10 other guests who were selected from those who sent in recipes for the program. A cookbook featuring all the chicken recipes made on the show and 130 others will be offered as a welcome gift to new WITF members who support public television.

Jim Shirk is one of the participants who is cooking his favorite chicken recipe for live television. Shirk is assistant vice president for PennAg Poultry Council. The WITF-TV cooking marathon will be broadcast today from 2 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. and rebroadcast on March 9 at 8 p.m.

Childcare Workshops

DAUPHIN (Dauphin Co.)–Penn State Cooperative Extension continues its series of satellite workshops for child care providers. This year the workshops will be held at locations in the upper and lower end of Dauphin County. The March workshop "How to Take the Stress Out of Caregiving" will be held on Tuesday, March 14, at the Valley's United Church of Christ located on Route 225 one miles south of Halifax.

The same workshop will be repeated on Tuesday, March 21 in the Educational Activities Building at Penn State Capital Campus, Middletown. Both workshops are from 7:00–9:00 p.m. At the workshop, participants will learn how caregiver stress affects children, how to recognize the signs and symptoms of burnout and how to deal with it. On-the-spot relaxation techniques will also be presented.

The second workshop "What Brain Research Tells Us About Infant Care" will be held on Tuesday, April 18, at the Valleys United Church of Christ and repeated on Monday, May 1, at the Penn State Capital Campus, both from 7:00–9:00 p.m. Participants will learn the type of care infants need at different ages, and how to make feeding, diapering, and sleeping more than just a routine.

Each workshop provides two DPW training credits. Continuing Education Credits are also available. Cost of each workshop is $3.00 per person. Deadline for registration is one week prior to each workshop. Registration forms may be obtained by contacting the Dauphin County Cooperative Extension office at (717) 921-8803 during regular business hours from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Tractor Driving Course Scheduled for March

LEESPORT (Berks Co.)–Tractors contribute to more than half of all fatalities on the farm, with the occupation of agriculture being the third most dangerous behind construction and mining. Youth who operate farm machinery, often underestimate their vulnerability when operating a tractor. Also, by law, youth under the age of 15 must be certified to operate a tractor as hired labor.

Penn State Cooperative Extension-Berks county is offering a 4-H Tractor Safety and Certification program for all youth. Youth need not be 4-H members in order to participate.

The program is scheduled for four evenings beginning on Monday, March 13, 2000 and continues on March 16, 20, 22. The course ends with written and driving tests scheduled for Saturday, March 25, 2000. Classes are held at the Berks County Ag Center and the Teen Challenge Farm in Rehrersburg. The cost for the program is $8.00 to cover the cost of the educational manual. A student also must obtain a copy of an operators manual from a tractor. Registration is due by March 3, 2000. Class size is limited to 20 participants.

For more information, contact the Penn State Cooperative Extension-Berks County, Berks County Ag Center, 1238 County Welfare Rd., PO Box 520, Leesport, PA 19533-0520. Telephone (610) 378-1327, Fax (610) 378-7961. Email: BerksExt@psu.edu.

Sensory Experiences for Children

Is March going to go out like a lion or a lamb?

Most of us wish for March to go out like a lamb, especially if we have young children at home and wish to give them fresh air and exercise outdoors. This truly is the time of year that tries parents and caregivers patience! Let's think about some new activities we can share with children and let's focus on toddlers.

What do you think about when you think of toddlers? We know they are inquisitive youngsters who are becoming more independent and learning exciting new skills. They learn to run, to hop, to jump, and to dance! As parents and caregivers we want to encourage the opportunity for these fun, sensory experiences.

Let's look at our role as parents. We know that there are a lot of wonderful things going on with children. What we as parents and caregivers specifically do makes a difference in your child's life. Sometimes we lose the enjoyment of being with kids. Burton White has said that every child needs to have one person who thinks that what they do is absolutely amazing and fascinating.

Amazing and fascinating!

It's amazing when children learn new words, learn to hop, learn to twirl, learn to recognize the letters in their name.

Are you reflecting this sense of wonder with your child?

Why is this so important? The recent brain research has shown that under age five, the primary action in the brain is connecting brain cells together. Rich, sensory experiences create connections for the child. So, we need to be providing these rich, sensory experiences for our children.

Encourage silly, rhymes and encourage movement. Get out those shakers and dance through your house to some fun music! Children love to swirl scarves through the air to music. Colorful scarves can become superhero capes and wardrobes as well. We know that reading is important. Why not try acting out the story in the book! Create your own props. The ideas are endless.

A second thing we can do as parents and caregivers is to be in tune with our children's emotions. What range of emotions is your child experiencing today? Happy, content, rested, sad?

Children need to learn to express their positive emotions. My daughter wanted to wear her "party shoes" to childcare this morning. We had a great time celebrating a party over the weekend, and she wanted more fun time. Give your children the opportunity to express their playful, fun, silly feelings.

Your role as a parent, grandparent, or caregiver or friend can make a very positive impact on your child. I read that the most important day in your child's life was the day you were born. That's powerful!

Provide many opportunities for fun, for movement, and for silliness with your child. Listen for your child's feelings and help her to express the positive ones.

For more information about parenting toddlers, "Toddler Topics" is a newsletter available from many cooperative extension offices. Best wishes as you and your child explore life together.

"In only three weeks of using the Chi Machine, I lost 15 pounds effortlessly - and hospital lab tests showed that my blood cholesterol level dropped from 225 to 160 mg"

How do I use my Chi Machine?

* Place the machine on a rug Lie on your back and put your ankles in the grooves of the footrest on top of the machine
* Set the timer switch to activate the machine for the number of minutes you desire First time users should start with 2-5 minutes
* The footrest will begin to move back and forth, carrying your feet briskly from side to side This movement will carry up through your legs and torso, throuthout your entire body, causing you to wiggle back and forth - that's right like a fish swimming in water
* All you do now is relax and breathe deeply, letting the machine rock you gently but firmly for a maximum of 15 minutes
* When the time is up and the machine stops, remain lying down for another two to five minutes, relaxing and breathing deeply, enjoying the remarkable afterglow - chi - as it moves throughout your body

"In two months of using the Chi Machine, my thighs, hips, stomach and buttocks now look as good as they did when I was in my 20's - and I'm almost 52"

Does your body get the oxygen it needs?
(Adapted from a quiz by Dr Eigi Noguchi)
Check all the boxes which apply to you -

- ☐ I wake up tired, even after eight hours of sleep
- ☐ I sleep restlessly, waking up frequently
- ☐ I suffer from chronic fatigue
- ☐ I have poor physical endurance
- ☐ I tend to be moody and irritable
- ☐ I am susceptible to colds and flu
- ☐ I suffer from allergies
- ☐ I frequently feel tense and on edge
- ☐ I am frequently constipated
- ☐ I have frequent pain in my shoulder and/or back
- ☐ I have weight problems
- ☐ I crave sweets, alcohol or soda

If you checked more than three boxes, your body might not be assimilating sufficient oxygen Please consult your physician You may wish to have your blood oxygen levels tested - before and after you begin to use the Chi Machine

QUESTION — Sandy Truckner, Avonmore, is looking for a recipe that had been printed in a children's cookbook that was popular in the late 1950s or early 1960s, where she lived in northeast Ohio. Called Eskimo Cookies, the no bake chocolate cookie did not contain rolled oats.

QUESTION — A reader wants a recipe to make chicken chow mein for 50-100 people.

QUESTION — A reader wants to know if it's possible to make puffed wheat or puffed rice without much financial investment.

QUESTION — Phyllis Stauffer, Carlisle, wants a recipe that Little Caesar's used to have. It was a buttery dip with herbs that they served with breadsticks.

ANSWER — Julia Hoover, Ephrata, sent in this recipe for Mrs. Zimmerman, Manheim.

Banana Split Dessert

2 or 3 bananas
1 cup chopped nuts
Graham cracker crust
2 cups confectioners' sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ gallon ice cream
1 cup chocolate chips
½ cup butter
1½ cups evaporated milk
1 pint whipped cream

Cover bottom of 11x15-inch pan with graham cracker crust. Slice bananas on crust. Slice ice cream one-inch thick. Place over bananas. Melt 1 cup chocolate chips and ½ cup butter, add confectioners' sugar and milk. Cook until thick. Remove from heat and add vanilla.

Cool, pour over ice cream. Freeze until firm.

Julie writes that this is good with or without the topping. Whip cream until stiff. Spread over chocolate later and add the remaining crumbs. Store in freezer. Will keep several weeks in freezer.

ANSWER - K. Weiler, Morgantown, wanted a bread machine recipe to make yeast potato bread using instant potato flakes. Thanks to Kim Mellott, Needmore, for sending a recipe.

Potato Bread

¾ cup plus 1 tablespoon 80-degree water
2 cups bread flour
⅓ cup instant potato flakes
1 tablespoon dry milk
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon butter, cut into four pieces
1½ teaspoons active dry yeast

Add ingredients to bread machine pan in the order listed. Bake on basic light setting for one-pound loaf.

ANSWER — Holly Hackenberg, Lewistown, wanted a source for teaberry candies. Thanks to S. Fisher, Lewistown, who writes that in Belleville the candies are available in the bulk food section of Peight's Country Store and at A.J. Peachey's. She uses the teaberry berries in ice cream and milkshakes. They also are good sprinkled on applesauce or canned pears.

ANSWER — Jody Applebee, Pratesburg, N.Y., wanted a recipe her mom used to make. It is a sticky bun that has orange Tang as one of the ingredients. Peg Koser, Lancaster, sent a recipe that doesn't include Tang. She writes that this recipe is her family's favorite. If anyone has the recipe using Tang, please send it and we will print it.

Sticky Buns

2 loaves frozen bread dough, thawed
½ cup melted butter
1 cup packed brown sugar
1 large box vanilla pudding (not instant)
2 tablespoons milk
Cinnamon, nuts, and raisins

Grease a 9x13-inch pan. Sprinkle nuts and raisins on bottom. Take two thawed loaves of bread dough and cut each loaf into six or seven pieces and place on top of nuts and raisins.

Make sauce by combining butter, brown sugar, pudding, and milk. Spread over bread. Sprinkle cinnamon on top. Cover with tea towel and let rise 2-3 hours. Bake at 325 degrees for 30-45 minutes. Top should be lightly browned. Invert pan immediately.

ANSWER — Here's another hint to keep homebaked cookies from becoming hard. Thanks to E.H. Martin, New Holland, who writes: Cut an unpeeled apple into quarters and place on top of plastic wrap covering cookies in an airtight container for approximately 24 hours before serving. If the apples touch any part of the cookie, that part will become soggy. For large amount of cookies, use more cut apples. Phyllis Greer, Gettysburg, sent in the same idea printed early to put a piece of bread in with the cookies stored in an airtight container. The cookies become soft and the bread hard, which can be used for dried bread crumbs if desired.

ANSWER — E. H. Martin, New Holland, sent another idea for the person who had trouble with soggy pie crusts: Place aluminum pie pans on cookie sheet when baking. This reflects heat.

CORRECTION — Jody Applebee had requested a recipe for chow chow, which a Paradise reader answered. She writes the printed recipe, which appeared in the Feb. 5th issue, should have read celery seed not celery salt.

ANSWER — Judy van der Wal requested a recipe for chocolate chip muffins. Thanks to Lil Nissley, Paradise, for sending a recipe.

Chocolate Chip Muffins

⅔ cup sugar
¾ teaspoon baking soda
¾ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 egg
1 cup sour cream
5 tablespoons butter, melted
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup chocolate chips

In a bowl, combine the first five ingredients. In another bowl, combine egg, sour cream, butter, and vanilla. Stir into dry ingredients just until moistened. Fold in chocolate chips. Fill greased or papered muffin tins three-fourths full. Bake at 350 degrees for 18-20 minutes or until muffin tests done. Yield: 1 dozen.

Thanks to Dorothy Stoms, Deerfield St., N.J., who sent in her recipe.

Sweet Muffins

1 egg
2 cups Bisquick baking mix
2 tablespoons vegetable oil_
⅓ cup sugar
⅔ cup milk
½ cup chocolate chips
½ cup chopped peanuts, optional

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Beat egg slightly in medium bowl; stir in remaining ingredients just until moistened. Divide batter evenly among paper baking cups. Bake until golden brown for 15-18 minutes. Makes 12 muffins.

Healthy

BEEF AND VEGETABLE MEDLEY

4-6½-ounces long grain wild rice mix
1 pound boneless beef sirloin steak, cut into strips
¾ teaspoon black pepper
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 cup red pepper strips
1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms
1 cup sliced zucchini
1 cup sliced yellow squash
⅓ cup sliced green onions
1 clove garlic, minced

Prepare rice mix as directed on package. Season beef with salt and black pepper; brown in oil in large skillet over high heat. Stir in peppers, mushrooms, zucchini squash, yellow squash, green onions, and garlic; stir-fry 3 to 4 minutes or until vegetables are tender crisp. Stir in rice; heat thoroughly. Makes 4 servings.

CHILI

1 pound extra lean ground beef
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped celery
½ cup chopped peppers
16-ounce can V8 juice
1 envelope chili seasoning
2 16-ounce cans tomatoes, chopped, juice included
2 16-ounce cans dark red kidney beans
¾ cup shredded cheddar cheese
1 cup sour cream

In 4-quart Dutch oven, brown beef, stir in onion, celery, and peppers. Reduce heat to simmer and keep cooking for 15-20 minutes, stirring frequently.

Add seasoning, V8 juice, tomatoes, and beans. Simmer for another half hour.

Serve hot with cheese sprinkled on top and a dollop of sour cream in the middle.

Farm Women

Lancaster Society 8

The Lancaster Society of Farm Women #8 met on Wednesday, February 9, at the Mount Joy Country Homes Community Room. The hostesses presented a delicious dessert table on the Valentine Theme.

Gladys Ney, president, presided at the business meeting. Delegates to the State Convention on Farm Show Week gave reports and related highlights of their trip.

Vera Albert, a noted local historian, focused on the history of presidential political buttons in her lecture entitled "Buttonmania."

Members are to note meeting date changes for March. March 1 is a luncheon at the Mount Joy Culinary Arts Center at 11 a.m. followed by a tour of the new Milanof-Schock Library.

On March 8 the society will travel to Willow Street to be luncheon guests of Society #22. A reservation for each luncheon is required. Call (717) 653-4389 if you have not yet signed up for either date.

York Society 26

York County Society of Farm Women #26 held the February meeting at Hillside Cafe, Etters. Beverly Laughman and Janette Lowery were hostesses. 14 members were present.

Vice President Jan Sechler conducted the business meeting. Donations were made to the Cancer Fund, Heart Association, Red Land Library, Annie E. Sterline Library, and Red Land Senior Citizens.

Guest Speaker, Roxanne Yost BS, RN gave a talk and showed a film on "Women and Heart Diseases."

Evelyn Beshore had a February birthday.

Berks Society 6

The Berks County Society of Farm Women Group 6 held its Jan. 18th meeting at the home of Barbara Kelchner. Six members attended.

The theme, An Afternoon for Reminiscing, included sharing scrapbooks and recalling memories.

During the business meeting, monetary donations were made to Oley Valley Senior Bash and to two local fire companies.

A member reported on the new booth of the Society of Farm Women at the Farm Show.

Spring Rally is scheduled for May 17.

York Society 11

Our January meeting was held at the home of Melba Dise; our opening was Jingle Bells followed by Scripture Prayer and the Pledge to the flag.

This year we will be celebrating 50 years. We have four living charter members. They are Ada Strickler, Alene Carman, Hester Keeney and Naomi Bupp.

Our roll call response was a recollection of things of the past starting with, I remember when–.

The Secretaries and Treasurers reports were given and the delegates to our first ever one-day convention at Harrisburg were discussed. All reports seemed favorable. We missed meeting at the Forum building in Harrisburg but appreciated being dropped off at the front door of the Penn Harris-Raddison and avoiding all the steps we had before.

The program was interesting and informative, and dinner was very good.

There were 240 delegates and friends attending. York Co. has 1 one-hundred-year-old member residing at Autumn House in York.

This year the Society of Farm Women had a booth at the Farm Show. The people who were attending the show over the weekend were excited about the responses, and a lot of cookbooks were sold.

Several games were played and prizes were given. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

The next meeting will be held at the Lions Pride at Red Lion with Charlotte Dubbs as hostess.

Choose A Perfect Pineapple

Pineapples don't ripen well after picking and their shell color, which can range from green to yellow, doesn't tell anything about flavor. In the field, pineapples ripen from the bottom, thus that's generally where the sweetest pieces will be. Unlike a watermelon, which should sound hollow when thumped, a flavorful pineapple should have a solid sound. In addition, it should have that pineapple smell.

Bring Japan

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.)–Bring the world into your home this summer by hosting a Japanese student! These young people are excited to learn about your family's customs and culture, your values, foods, clothes, and lifestyles. But, mostly they want to make friends with other young people and try communicating in English.

The exchangees of this program range in age from 12 to 18 years old and are members of either the Japanese Lex, Labo, or Utrek Organizations. Since 1972, over 33,000 Japanese youth have stayed with families in North America. The Japanese teenagers will stay with their American host families the last two weeks of July and the first two weeks of August.

The costs of hosting a Japanese student are minimal. The Japanese organizations provide complete medical insurance, and students bring their own spending money for souvenirs and person purchases. Hosts are not required to be 4-H members to participate, although the Penn State approved screening process is required.

Host family applications and additional information about this or other 4-H opportunities are available by contacting Laurie Szoke, Chester County 4-H Coordinator, at Penn State Cooperative, 601 Westtown Road, Suite 370, P.O. Box 2747, West Chester, PA 19380-0990, or you may call the office at 610-696-3500.

Kids Korner

Winter Provides Learning Activities

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)–Your home is buried under snow and the kids are getting cabin fever. Jim Van Horn, family life specialist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, offers some fun–and inexpensive–ideas.

Ages 2–3

• Animal sounds. Take turns guessing which animal you or your child is imitating. But don't guess immediately. Your child says, "Meow."

"That can't be a dog," you say, puzzled, "And it isn't a fish. Oh, I known–you are a cat!"

• Categories. Take turns listing farm animals, fruits, wild animals, 'things we eat' or other familiar items. Note them on paper, then count them.

• Visit the post office. A good time to visit is early morning. Let your children make cards or write letters, then put them in self-addressed envelopes. They can buy stamps, put them on the envelopes, then mail them. The card will be delivered to them–like magic.

• Grow an indoor "lawn." Put a sponge in a dish half-filled with water. Sprinkle with seed, then push seeds gently into the sponge with a fork until wet, but not underwater. Water the bottom as needed. In a few weeks, you can "mow" your lawn with safety scissors.

• Paint "blobs." Fold construction paper in half, drop tempera paint into the fold, then let your children press on the outside. Some may want to finish their picture with crayons.

• Make cards. Let your children tear hearts from construction paper, then decorate them with stickers, paper doilies, glitter, etc. Or, cut heart shapes, then let them tear the decorations.

• The library. Story hour is a good way to introduce children to the library. As soon as they show any interest in books, get them cards and help them choose their own books.

• Magnify. Use a plastic magnifying glass to discover details of familiar objects. Your children can examine their hands, a coin, a bottle cap, some bark, a piece of newsprint or a leaf.

Ages 4–6

• "Drawing our Family" book. Cover cardboard or an old picture album with fabric or contact paper. Fill the book with blank pages so your children can draw pictures about your family. They might draw their bedroom, tree or pet. Write down their description of the picture.

• Snow play. All family members can help clear snow from sidewalks or cars. You also might shovel for an older or sick neighbor. Look for animal tracks or make your own. Make paths, angels or other shapes. Inner tubes, boxes or trays make good sleds for younger children.

• Night walk. A walk around your neighborhood or community is particularly fun on snowy or moonlit nights. Your children can use a flashlight. Things look and sound different at night.

• Pretend car drive around town. Set two chairs side by side, then give your children pot lids or pie tins for steering wheels. Climb in the "car" and let them drive you around. Do they know how to get to grandmother's house? Can they get you to the grocery store?

• Animal lotto. Cut pictures from magazines, or draw pictures of animals. Try to get two of each kind. Try also to get adults and babies. Include birds, reptiles and fish. Then, play matching games. Match the same kinds of animals. Get all the big animals, or little ones.

• Grow an indoor orchard. Start a little orchard from citrus seeds. All you need are soil-filled flower pots. Dry seeds for a few hours, then place several in each pot. Cover with a quarter inch of soil and water, then place them on a sunny windowsill. When shoots grow two inches, snip all but the strongest in each pot. Don't pull–you may disturb the other's root.

• Room decorating. Mount a bulletin board for drawings, posters, etc. Suggest the children cut out such things as pumpkins in fall, snow persons in winter and daffodils in spring. They also can make their own wastebasket from a round gallon container or cardboard box. Cover it with construction or adhesive paper and decorate it with odds and ends.

• Homemade puzzles. Paste a picture on a piece of cardboard, then cut it into four or five pieces. As your child gets more skilled, cut smaller pieces.

Ages 7–8

• Window herb garden. Good herbs include chives, parsley, mint, dill, marjoram, sage, savory and thyme. Label pots on a tray. Water every four or five days. When the plants are four inches tall, you can pick the leaves. Cut chives with scissors about an inch above the soil.

• Seed catalog cards. Cut pictures from old catalogs or magazines. Using a glue stick or school paste, paste them onto blank pieces of paper, folded into cards. Your child can write her own messages and use them for gift cards or thank you notes.

• Paint snow scenes on your windows. Mix glass paint, whitening or Bon Ami with enough water to make a paste-like consistency. Paint on the window with a brush.

• Hold a play or talent show. Present a 15-minute play. Have a good reader read the lines while others act. Scenery isn't needed unless you have a hungry "set designer." Shy children can direct. Everyone has a skill, be it tumbling or singing, for a talent show.

• Design a family monogram. Use your family's name. All members should have their say about the design. You could make the housemark into a stamp and mark your books and toys.

• Communication neighbors. Call your local radio or TV station to find a good time to visit. Most stations will be glad to take you on a tour. You may see a show being produced, or visit a studio and control room. Your child will learn how programs are broadcast to your home.

• Family community team. Teach kids how to get a task done by dividing it into parts. Think of jobs you can do together, like preparing meals, cleaning the house, planning a spring park cleanup or shoveling walks for a shut-in neighbor. Do them.

• Decorate paper. Stamp pictures on paper, using a stamp pad and stampers. Stampers can be anything from paper clips, spools, keys, buttons and cookie cutters to apple slices. Use the paper for book covers, gift boxes, letters, etc.

Low Sugar Snacks For Kids Or Adults

Here are ideas for quick and simple, low-sugar snacks. They are good for adults and easy enough for kids to make with minimum supervision.

•Spread nonfat strawberry-flavored cream cheese on celery sticks and top with holiday sprinkles.

•Especially for kids: Cut whole wheat bread, low-fat ham and low-fat cheese with cookie cutters. These will make open face sandwiches.

How do insects stay warm in the winter?
On cold, winter days animals stay warm with their heavy fur coat, people bundle up in a thick layer of clothes, and most insects make their own antifreeze! Antifreeze literally means to not freeze. It's a special liquid made out of alcohol that won't get hard the way ice does, even at very low temperatures. Take water, for example. It turns into ice at 32 degrees Fahrenheit. But antifreeze stays liquid even when it gets much, much colder. When you mix antifreeze with other liquids, it keeps them from freezing as fast. That's why you put antifreeze in a car's radiator — it keeps the water there from turning into ice, which can really damage a car.
Insect antifreeze works the same way — except that insects make their own. The shorter, colder days of early fall let insects know it's time to conserve energy stores for the long winter ahead. When insects burn fewer energy stores, a sweet, sticky alcohol called glycerol builds up in their bodies.
Glycerol works like the car antifreeze. When it mixes around inside an insect's body, the whole insect becomes more freeze-resistant. In fact, our entomologist friends say some insects even tolerate temperatures far below zero. Now that's a way to keep warm!

Filing Income Tax Returns Doesn't Have To Be Taxing

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)–No one–not even accountants–likes to organize receipts, papers, canceled checks and financial statements at tax time. But if you start now, and do a little at a time, the task will be easier than if you wait until the last minute, says a family and consumer sciences educator in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"The key is to keep good records," says Marilyn Furry, associate professor of extension education. "That way, in coming years, you can save the time and stress of locating documents."

To avoid dreading the April tax deadline, Furry offers these suggestions:

Organize paperwork

"Now's the time to organize income receipts, bank and mortgage statements, medical bills and charitable donations– any receipt or paper you'll need at income tax preparation time," Furry says. "Use file folders for the different categories and put them in a box or file labeled '1999 Taxes.' Search all your records to be sure you have everything you need to calculate your taxes."

Furry also suggests keeping a separate folder for home improvement bills and receipts. "This file will serve as a a ready inventory when you sell your home, or as a record of the cost and date of replacement or improvement items," she says.

Save tax forms, wage and income statements

"During January, you should receive wage and income statements and tax forms in the mail," Furry says. "The envelopes will be marked 'tax information enclosed.' Put them immediately in the appropriate folder."

To avoid losing or misplacing 1099s and other important papers, Furry recommends using a workable filing system." A good filing system will save you time and reduce stress," she says. "Whatever you do, don't dump everything into a box for the accountant. If he or she must organize your documents before preparing your tax return, this will cost you money."

Read latest tax planning information

Furry recommends updating yourself on the most current information regarding tax deductions, exclusions, credits and other tax matters. Publication 17, "Your Federal Income Tax: For Individuals," is revised annually and provides easy-to-read instructions for completing your return. Call the IRS at (800) 829-3676 to receive Publication 17 and any federal income tax forms you need.

Begin the process early

"The sooner you start gathering information, the better," Furry says. "Pull bank statements and canceled checks, investment information, local, state and federal taxes, child care expenses, contributions to an IRA (date, amount invested and date opened), and statements from brokerage accounts from your files. Compile receipts for medical expenses that are not reimbursed or that you paid out-of-pocket, employer's W2s, and 1099s from a variety of sources, including banks and mutual fund companies. You'll need all of these to complete a tax return.

"Financial advisors suggest you prepare your return or hire a preparer very early in 2000," she adds. "If additional information is needed, you'll have sufficient time to get it."

Complete tax return in pencil

Furry recommends using pencil on your tax return so you can make changes easily. You also can reduce math errors by rounding amounts to the nearest whole dollar. "Then, wait a few days to review the return for accuracy and items you may have missed," she says. "Common mistakes include math errors and missing social security numbers and signatures. The IRS accepts photocopies of pencil-prepared returns, as long as they include an original signature of the individual(s) filing.

"A great resource for tax tips, latest changes, tax tables, tax forms and other valuable information can be found on the web at http://www.irs.gov/ind_info/index.html," Furry adds. "You can download IRS Publication 17 from this site."

Cost Of Raising A Child

The average cost of raising a child to age 18 is $153,660–$8,536 annually, according to data from the U.S. Department of Agriculture. This has increased from $136,800 in 1960 ($7,600 annually). The increase accounts for inflation as well as for the cost of child care.

Seven categories are included: housing, food, transportation, clothing, health care, child care and education, and miscellaneous goods and services. The estimates do not include expenditures made by grandparents or friends. Housing accounts for the largest share of child-rearing costs, followed by food. Transportation makes up between 14 and 15 percent of expenses; clothing accounts for 6 to 8 percent and miscellaneous goods and services (personal care items and reading materials, for example) account for between 10 and 13 percent.

Pennsylvania Young Farmers Over 30 are J.Kenneth and Lisa Wiker. They own a 75-acre dairy farm in Holtwood. In addition they rent 200 acres. As a hobby, they grow 5-acres of cabbage and daylilies for a wholesaler.

Wikers Are Pennsylvania's Outstanding Young Farmers Over 30

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HOLTWOOD (Lancaster Co.) — "I'm just an ordinary guy, not very interesting for a story," Ken Wiker said.

Wiker may be an ordinary guy but he's done a remarkable job on his 75-acre Holtwood farm. He recently received the Outstanding Farmer Over 30 Award at the annual convention of Pennsylvania Young Farmers.

Ken, his wife Lisa, and children Matt, 11, and Emily, 9, work together milking Holsteins and farming about 300 acres.

Sounds ordinary.

But what is unusual is that the Wikers raise cabbage and daylilies.

Wiker said that he got into the alternative crops as a hobby. But raising five acres of green cabbage outgrew the hobby status.

Harvesting cabbage is labor intensive, requiring each head to be cut off with a knife and boxed for wholesale marketing.

Suffice it to say that neither his wife nor his kids share the same passion for hobby farming when the seasonal crop demands sunup to sundown harvesting. Even Wiker grew weary of the labor-intensive crop.

The Wikers stumbled across a crop that they do enjoy harvesting — daylilies.

A neighbor who sells greenhouse supplies asked the Wikers to grow Stellardore daylilies.

According to Lisa, growing daylily roots is fairly easy. And most welcoming is that they can use a potato digger to remove the roots to sell. The roots need to be divided annually and replanted. Depending on the weather, both a spring and a fall crop can be harvested.

Because raising cabbage is no longer a hobby, Wiker said that he is considering phasing out growing it and planting more flowers.

"With flowers you only need to use a herbicide and cultivate them. You don't need to worry about bugs," he said. He also plants two acres of pumpkins.

Of course, flowers, pumpkins, and cabbage are only sideline businesses from the mainstay of milking and crop growing.

Two years ago, the Wikers added 20 stalls that forms an L-shaped barn. Lots of windows allows natural sunlight. At that time, they also added a TMR mixer, which makes feeding much simpler, and automatic water bowls.

Mattresses and barn stormer fans increase cow comfort. About 95 cows are milked twice daily with a pipeline system. Herd production is 23,000 pounds milk, 725 pounds protein, and 810 pounds butterfat. BST is used to maintain production on lower-producing cows.

Wiker generally takes care of the twice daily milking except on weekends, when Lisa and Matt help. Milk is shipped to Land O' Lakes.

Wiker recently purchased the home farm from his dad, Ken, who continues to help out with the fieldwork. Conservation practices were always important on the Wiker farm. These include contour strips that range in size from two and a half to five acres. Terraces and grass waterways control erosion and water movement on the soil, which is a combination of Glenig and Chester silt loam.

Wiker said that cropping with rye and corn silage is important for controlling soil runoff.

Put quality silage under wraps

Choose from two models:

- Model B27P is an economic utility wrapper for medium-volume silage producers
- Model B37P is ideal for custom harvesters or operations wrapping large volumes of bales

Both offer a side-mounted lifting arm, three-belt turntable, two large side-support rollers, and cable controls. The B37P is available with computer controls.

Things Keep Buzzing At Honey Crest Farm

Stewart Mathias was recently named Pennsylvania Beekeeper of the Year. Mathias has long been involved in numerous aspects of the beekeeping and honey industry. He is known for his dedication and extensive volunteer work in teaching students the intricacies of beekeeeping.

Honey and beeswax is labeled Honey Crest Farm.

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HUMMELSTOWN (Dauphin Co.) — More than bees are buzzing at Honey Crest Farm.

It's the place where Stewart Mathias keeps experimenting and finding more projects related to beekeeping. For his dedication with the Capitol Region Beekeeping Association and his extensive promotional work, Mathias was recently received the Pennsylvania Beekeeper of the Year Award.

Mathias maintains 42 hives on and nearby his Hummelstown property. His basement contains all the equipment needed for processing the honey he markets under the label Honey Crest Farm.

"I got into bees because I read that comb honey helps asthma," Mathias said.

He no longer has asthma. "Whether it was the honey or outgrowing it, I don't know," Mathias said.

What he does know is that the hobby he began in 1965 continues to fascinate him.

Bees collect pollen on their legs as they sip nectar from the flowers. When they return to their hives, the bees regurgitate the liquid into cells in the honeycomb, where it is stored to provide food for larvae and themselves.

That's the abbreviated explanation. There's a lot more to know about beekeeping. In recent years, the honeybee industry has faced devastating losses from a mite invasion.

Two years ago, Mathias lost 50 percent of his hives. Bees are important pollinators of crops such as soybeans, sunflowers, fruits, and many other plants.

Beekeeping as an ancient branch of agriculture, and wild bees were responsible with pollinating crops. But the spread of parasitic mites has created a bee deficit.

Maintained colonies in wooden hives help provide bees to pollinate an estimated 65 million acres in the U.S.

Mites have plagued beekeepers for years. The mite problem has discouraged many people from continuing beekeeping. But Mathias is optimistic. He believes scientific research is on the brink of eradicating the plague.

"There's a new Russian queen bee that will be released to some beekeepers," Mathias said. The Russian queen shows resistance to the mite. However, it is available on a very limited basis this year and Mathias knows he won't be on the receiving end for awhile.

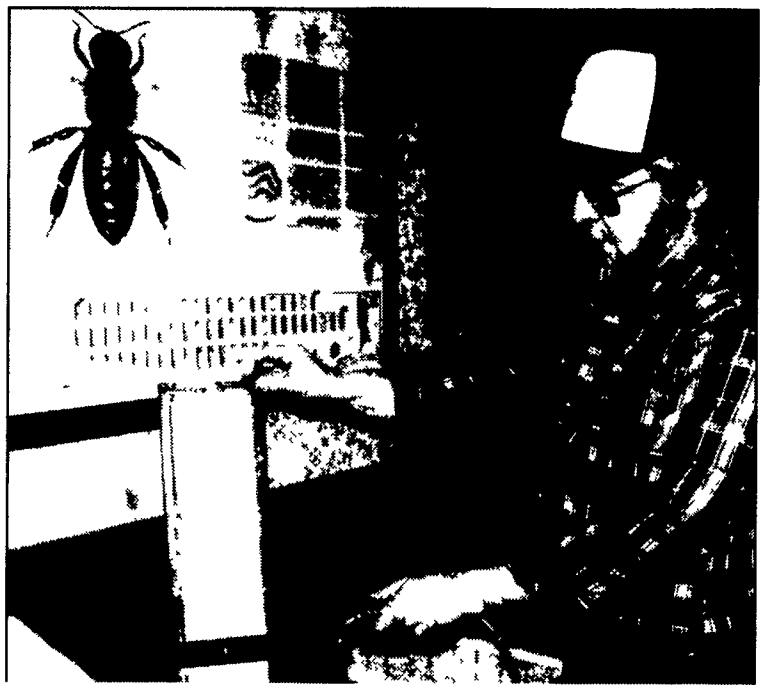
Mathias has his eye set on obtaining formic acid, a chemical that shows promise in eradicating mites.

Because Apistan has been used for the past 11 years, some resistance appears to have built up in the bees.

"We don't use the same crop pesticides over and over so we shouldn't expect to be able to use the same chemical to combat mites," Mathias said.

Chemicals can only be applied after the last honey is pulled off the hives before winter.

"I give up some of my fall crop in order to apply the treatment before cold weather sets in," he said.



Uncapping honey exposes every cell of honey. After extracting, the honey is placed in an extractor where it is quickly spun and placed in a holding tank for bottling.

This enables the bees to have more honey to remain healthier during winter months.

Mathias had heard about beekeeping from his brother-in-law who lives in Bloomsburg. After taking a short course offered by Delaware Valley College, Mathias got the basics down pat.

When Mathias first began beekeeping, he worked for H.B. Reese Candy Company. After 37 years, he retired. But he keeps busier than ever managing the 12 acres on his property, where he incorporated a forestry plan.

The purpose of enrolling in the Forest Stewardship Program is to return the land to nature. A 10-year-plan has been designed for his acreage. In the three years of plan participation, Mathias has built fence rows, brush piles, and planted trees. Not only is this beneficial to what is typically considered wildlife but also bees.

Wildlife is sometimes more plentiful on his property than desired. Skunks, redtail hawks and deer have played havoc with his efforts to raise Bobwhite quail. The first year he planted sunflowers to sell, the deer ate them all.

To protect his vegetable and flower garden, Mathias needed to surround it with an electric fence.

"I plant two fields, one with game mix, which includes wild flowers for the birds, and one for my own use," Mathias said.

Flowers and trees are planted specifically for the bees. Some of the bees' favorites are yellow sweet clover, orchard trees, basswood trees, and lavender.

Mathias got into raising flowers for wholesale the year that he planted broom corn for his own curiosity.

The crop was so plentiful, Mathias loaded up his pickup truck with broom corn.

"I went from one end of Hershey to the other giving away free broom corn to whatever florist who wanted it," Mathias said.

Since that contact, florists call him and ask him to grow select items for him. Some of the most often asked for plants are delphiniums, yarrows, and curly willow. Upon request, he's also forcing pear and cherry blossoms, which florists like to use as filler for large arrangements

A bucketful of the blossoms took two weeks to bloom after he brought them inside and sat them in a sunny spot in the family room.

Mathias sees marketing potential in forcing pear and cherry blossoms. He needs to prune the fruit trees anyway, and if he can sell what he normally throws away — that's profitable.

Despite many years of studying bees both in the book and in nature, Mathias continues to find surprising behavior of the insects.

Recently he noticed a heavy covering of bees at the bird feeders on his property. Upon closer inspection, he saw that the bees were consuming the dextrose released from the cracked corn in the feeder. Now Mathias puts out trays of cracked corn for the bees. After they feed on the sticky dextrose, Mathias throws the leftover corn to the birds, who seem to be just as pleased with it.

This year, another surprise surfaced in the bee world, Mathias found bees feeding on broccoli heads as late as January.

Last year, he had noticed bees transporting honey on Dec. 16. Curious to know the source, Mathias traced the source to some broccoli that had been left stand in the fields. Broccoli withstands frost and had forms yellow flower heads, where the bees ingested the nectar and pollen.

Mathias' beekeeping passion is being passed on to his children and grandchildren. Daughter Jill (now Clark), a former Pennsylvania Honey Queen and American (national) princess, has established a career in the industry. She is director of marketing and technical services for Dutch Gold.

"She sells honey by the tanker load," Mathias said. Clark is also the treasurer of the National Honey Board.

Mathias is confident his two grandsons, two and four years old, will carry on the beekeeping interest.

"The 4-year-old already gave a beekeeping presentation at his nursery school," Mathias said.

Department Of Agriculture Requires Honey Inspection

Due to the value of bees as pollinators of agricultural crops, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture conducts a bee inspection program. Seasonal inspectors work throughout the state contacting beekeepers and checking their bees for diseases and parasites.

When problems are found, the inspector will provide appropriate recommendations to treat the problem. To help the bee inspectors locate apiaries, all beekeepers are required by law to register their bees with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. A $10 fee is required to register any number of apiaries and is valid for a two-year period.

Any questions about bee diseases, registration or inspection can be directed to Jim Steinhauer, chief apiary inspector, PDA, Bureau of Plant Industry, 2301 N. Cameron St., Harrisburg, PA. Call (717) 772-5225.

Visual History Will Help Loved Ones In Nursing Homes

When loved ones enter a nursing home, often they must leave identities behind. And, care givers, knowing little or nothing about those under their care, tend to refer to our parents or grandparents only as patients in beds 2A or 3B.

Building a shadow box and filling it with mementos of a person's life, could help solve this problem. A shadow box (or a collage) could contain pictures and treasured items from a person's life–travel photos, pictures of pets, samples of needlework or woodwork; a favorite baseball cap. From time to time, the contents could be changed. Not only would nursing home residents enjoy these familiar items, but care givers, as well as visitors, would find them to be topics of discussion with patients. This is a simple way to improve communication and to increase everyone's satisfaction with a difficult situation.

Dairy Of Distinction Seeks Nice Looking Farms

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Do you take pride in maintaining your dairy farm? Does your farm project an attractive, wholesome image to consumers? If so, the Dairy of Distinction Program of Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, and Vermont is looking for you.

The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program that oversees the Distinction program was first started in 1983 in Pennsylvania. The Dairy of Distinction recognize the hard work and dedication of the farmers who maintain attractive farms.

The purpose of the program is to instill a greater sense of confidence in the wholesomeness of dairy products, thus increasing sales.

Farms that apply are judged on the roadside appearance of building, grounds, and surroundings, since this is what our dairy product consumers observe as they drive by the farm.

The cleanliness of the barnyard, feed areas, and manure management are all areas taken into consideration when a team of judges takes a look at your farm from the road. Your milk cooperative or handler will be contacted to approve your milk quality.

Judging is conducted during the month of May. Award winners are announced during local June Dairy Month activities. To qualify for consideration, you must be actively dairy farming and shipping milk.

Del-Jame Farm near Hamburg in Berks County is a 1999 Dairy of Distinction winner. Since the program began in 1987 in Pennsylvania, more than 700 farms have been given this farm beautification award. Entries are now being received for the year 2000 program. Take time to enter your farm now.

Applications are available for Pennsylvania dairy farms from Michael O'Conner, 324 Henning Building, Dept. of Dairy and Animal Science, Penn State University, University Park, PA 16802. Phone: (814) 863-3913.

New York State applications are available from Carol Keene-Ainsille, 3993 Jordonville Road, Jordonville, NY 13361. Phone: (315) 858-2770.

For New Jersey applications, contact Joy Ricker, 91 Beemer Road, Sussex, NJ 07461. Phone: (973) 875-4803.

For Vermont applications, send to Elisa Clancy, Vermont Department of Agriculture, 16 State Street, Drawer 20, Montpelier, VT 05620-2901. Phone: (802) 828-3835.

All applications must be completed and returned to your respective state secretary by April 15, 2000.

The Dairy of Distinction program is financed in Pennsylvania by dairy farmers through the American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East and the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program in cooperation with many local agribusiness organizations. The program is conducted with advice and help from the Penn State Cooperative Extension.

HOW IS YOUR FARM SCORED?

Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program Inc.

Awards will be based upon neatness, good maintenance, and other factors that can be controlled by the farmer. Attractive background scenery should not be weighted heavily in judging. All judging observations should be made from a vehicle at one or more points on an adjacent public highway. If the farm is off the road, the judging will take place from the nearest lane. Judging should give equal consideration to old wood construction and new construction of metal or concrete block.

The award program may be used for subsequent advertising or promotion activities for dairy products or dairy farming. Farmers who apply for the award agree that if selected they will cooperate with these promotion activities and make all reasonable efforts to maintain both the exterior and interior of heir properties in an acceptable manner.

HOW THE APPLICATION WORKS

The owner or operator of the dairy farm should sign the application and send it to the Dairy of Distinction state secretary by April 15.

HOW THE JUDGING WORKS

Judging teams will visit farms during the month of May. Farms will be judged each year as the award is presented on an annual basis. Any dairy failing to maintain appearance standards will be asked to remove their signs. The Dairy of Distinction signs remain the property of the committee, not the property of the dairy farmer. All farms must achieve a compliance score of 90 percent on their Dairy of Distinction score card. Your cooperative or milk handler will be contacted to approve your milk quality.

RULES FOR THE DAIRY OF DISTINCTION AWARD

1) The Dairy of Distinction sign remains property of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Committee.
2) The post and bracket shall be supplied by and maintained by the dairy farmer. It is suggested that a wood post 4' x 4' x 12' or iron pipe 2' x 12' can be used. Posts or pipe should be installed and maintained in true vertical position with 8' above ground. Top of the bracket should be lower than six inches from the top of the post.
3) Signs shall be displayed in front of the dairy at roadside. An attractive post or bracket, or other frame, shall be used to display the sign. No more than three signs should be displayed from the sign frame or post, and all shall be of a style, general size, and quality comparable to the Dairy of Distinction sign. Sign should be secured on all sides to avoid wind damages.
4) Signs shall not be moved to other premises. New owners of a Dairy of Distinction farm must apply to retain the sign
5) Replacement of damaged signs is at the committee's discretion.
6) No producer shall be charged with scoring or sign expenses.
7) Judges' decisions will be final.
8) Judging will take place between May 1st and May 31st.
9) Farms awarded a Dairy of Distinction sign in previous years will be judged between April 1st and April 30th. If they do not qualify, they will be rejudged between May 1st and May 31st so they have the opportunity to keep the sign.
10) Farms that do not requalify will return the sign to their regional Dairy of Distinction committee

Dairy of Distinction
2000 Pennsylvania Application

PURPOSE OF PROGRAM

Attractive dairy farms give the consumer greater confidence in the wholesomeness of milk and stimulate milk sales which encourages public support for the dairy industry The award gives recognition to the dairy farmer for maintaining a well-kept farmstead

ELIGIBILITY

All Northeast dairy farms producing milk for sale are invited to submit an application for the award Dairies receiving the 10 highest scores in each of the 21 districts will receive an 18" x 24" Dairy of Distinction sign to be displayed in front of their farm planting, and spraying. About 75 percent of the alfalfa is chopped and harvested as haylage, and 25 percent of the alfalfa is used for hay. About 60-acres of corn is used as silage and 140 acres is sown for grain.

Twelve years ago, a manure storage structure was erected, which has proven to be effective in saving time and labor.

Recently a spring system was developed in the heifer pasture. Wiker said, this allows a larger grazing area and reduces the silting of the spring that feeds into a nearby stream.

The Wikers believe that family time is important. During the slow seasons, Matt or Emily choose an activity for a family fun night. During the planting and harvesting seasons, time scheduling is a bit difficult, but the Wikers try to fit time for family fun into their schedule.

The children are active in 4-H activities. Matt plays baseball, and Emily plays the piano. They also spends some days at a family cabin in Tioga County.

The family is active at the Brethren In Christ Church, Refton, where Lisa teaches a Sunday school class.

The Wiker home is freshly remodeled and each room has many Longaberger baskets used as accent pieces.

When asked what he would like to accomplish in the future, Wiker quickly answered, "More free time."

That's an answer that confirms that Wiker is indeed an ordinary guy — it's a wish that most every farmer desires.

Seminar Teaches Optimism Tempered By Realism

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Don't underestimate the competition.

Threatening words, but reality for farmers who are jockeying for position in a global economy.

Marcia Zarley Taylor, editor of "Top Producer," a business magazine for executive farmers, said at the agri-educational seminar sponsored by First Union Bank last week, that the Brazilian frontier is impacting U.S. agriculture more than any other influence in the past 20 years.

Two years ago, Taylor took her first trip to the Brazilian interior. What she saw opened her eyes to many myths that the U.S. agriculture community accepts as truth.

Brazil, the size of 48 continental U.S. states, is not a wasteland as previously viewed. Treat the soil with phosphate and lime and they produce 40 bushels of soybeans per acre. Land is being cleared for planting at amazing speed. Two men can clear an average of 100 acres daily.

A second trip Taylor took to Brazil confirmed the following realities:

■ It's not soil quality but water that counts.

Brazil has 80 percent of the world's fresh water supplies with 50-80-inches falling during the growing season, which is like free irrigation.

Marcia Taylor's insight dispelled the common myths that have clouded American agriculture and given the U.S. soybean industry such a sudden and cruel across-the-board price jolt since 1997.

In 30 years, farmers who have raised crops in the area have never known a weather disaster. Brazilians are adapting to the latest technology and are learning to maximize the free irrigation by double cropping soybeans followed by corn in the same season.

■ Brazil holds about 225 million arable acres, with only 10-20 percent of that being farmed today, but a frenzy of expansion continues to increase. Compare their acreage with the U.S., which plants 60 to 72 million acres of soybeans in the U.S. annually.

■ The U.S. is not the lowest cost producer. Brazilians are cost effective in everything.

The smallest Brazilian farmers farm 6,000 acres and large farmers 30,000 acres. Using modern equipment, Brazil can produce crops much more economically. Former transportation problems are being solved. Rivers are the roads that need no asphalt or steel. Water routes have cut costs on imported fertilizer and on shipping out soybeans.

"Transportation improvements are geared for exports. All expansion will go to global markets," Taylor said.

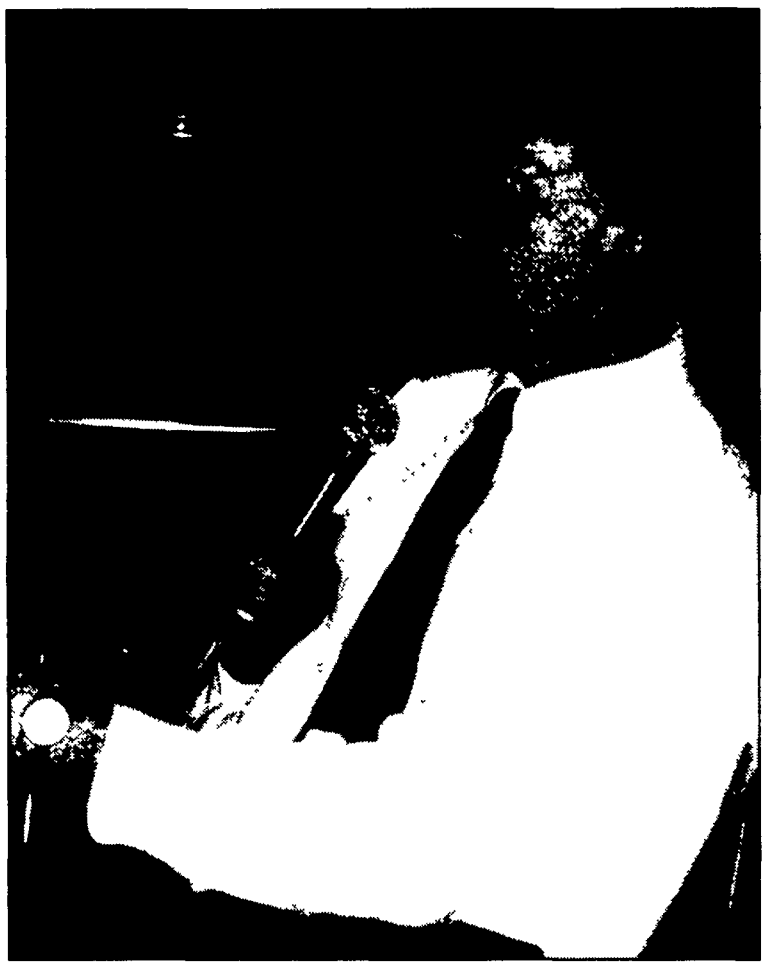
■ Brazil has displaced France as the world's largest poultry exporter in recent years.

"There is no reason why pork can't be next," Taylor said. Despite textbook theories that hogs couldn't be raised in the tropics because confinement would cause respiratory infections, Brazilians are raising hogs and chickens without problems with respiratory diseases.

Of the hog facility Taylor visited, she said, "It was the cleanest, best smelling one I've ever visited."

Taylor challenged the audience to be cost effective in everything and to guard the homegrown market with care. Despite the opposition, Taylor believes, the U.S. has the potential to exploit value-added produce.

The economic outlook, marketing, and federal policy changes were addressed by G. David Orr, vice president and chief economist for First Union; H. Louis Moore, ag economics professor; and David Kohl, ag economics professor.



"Food represents national security. Do we want our food imported?" asks Dr. David Kohl.

Orr revealed how economic predictions can be misleading when they are based on wrong statistics. Orr explained the reasons he believes that the economy will continue to thrive but slow down.

Moore said that while the overall economy has experienced the largest economic growth ever, agriculture has faced obstacles of drought, fickle export markets, and flunctuating grain and livestock supplies.

Any improvement in ag prices since the beginning of the decade is due to drough.

Although Pennsylvanian farmers receive only one percent of government payments, what happens nationwide affects them.

For example, last year farm income nationwide was the second best in income during the 1990s. However 39 percent of that income was from government and emergency payments. Take away those payments and the income would be the worse year instead of one of the best.

An election year shows promise of helping farmers because farmers are in bad shape and politicians will want to appease them.

European trade barriers reflect the European Union's inability to compete economically with the rest of the world. Moore sees this as a delay tactic that will disappear with time.

Kohl challenged, "Food represents national security. Do we want our food imported?"

A new mindset of agri-entreupreneurers are needed to offset farm prices. Kohl said that too much electronic clutter causes people to focus on what's plaque with many show ribbons attest to his previous involvement in the industry.

David Orr explains complicated financial charts in layman's language.

Buzzing At Honey Crest Farm

Mathias teaches beekeeping to students at Milton Hershey School. He helps students set up from start to finish.

"When the class is over, the students have a product to sell," Mathias said of the six students assigned to his tutelage. Few seem wary of the possibility of bee stings while working with the hives.

Although he gets stung occasionally, Mathias said that beekeepers learn quickly to leave bees alone before oncoming thunderstorms, high humidity, and hot weather. It's important to be aware of the flight pattern of bees so that one doesn't stand in that area when working with the hive.

Because warm hives encourage more bee activity, hives should be positioned to face toward the sun and protected by tree or bushlines. One of his hives in Clinton County was molested by a bear. With a buddy, Mathias devised a hive placed inside an abandoned refrigerator and cabled to a tree. An opening cut in the refrigerator side allows the bees to come and go. Despite markings showing that the refrigerator has been scratched and clawed by a bear, the hive remains protected.

"The hive is placed 2000 feet atop a mountain and produces a different tasting honey," Mathias said.

On a strong hive, Mathias makes what he calls splits. He takes the frame of brood bees to another location and introduces another queen bee, and the hive process is repeated. Typically queen bees are shipped from the south where they appear earlier in the season because of the warm weather.

In addition to teaching classes at the Hershey school and at other places when requested, Mathias often provides observation hives for classroom usage and for craft shows where he also sells honey.

Mathias thrives on the interest students show in beekeeping.

"I don't get paid for this, but I enjoy it. My goal is to see one of my students become the next secretary of agriculture," he said.

Mathias has pictures of him extracting honey before such celebrities as Gov. Thomas Ridge and his son.

Depending where bees feed, he said, honey has a different flavor. People looking for asthma relief should use honey gathered from the area where they live. Honey produced from the area helps prevent allergic reactions to pollen and airborne seed.

He bottles wildflower, locust, and clover honey. He calls locust honey the ideal honey.

Most of the cooking with honey is left to Mathias's wife Carol, but he does experiment with bread making. Using a breadmaker and different varieties of honey, Mathias has discovered his favorite combination is buckwheat flour and whole wheat flour.

It seems that Mathias never tires of finding new beekeeping-related projects. Parts of the wooden hives that are saturated with honey deteriate. Rather than discard them, Mathias cuts the pieces to form birdhouses.

A former president of the Capital Area Beekeepers, Mathias now serves as treasurer of the promotional fund and as assistant manager of the association's booth at the Farm Show, Ag Progress Days, and Keystone International Livestock Exposition. He initiated having logos designed for both the county and the state associations. These logo patches are available to attach to hats and shirts, and other clothing.

From discarded beehives, Mathias cuts out hundreds of bluebird houses to place on his property. He enrolled 12 acres in the Forest Stewardship Program. The 10-year plan to return the land to nature includes the establishment of fence rows, brush piles, and more trees.

urgent rather than on what's important.

He forsees medical and pharmaceutical uses for food as a potential breakthrough. He cited recent research that extracts a substance from milk that is placed on cuts and results in healing within a few hours.

"Surviving in the next millenium depends on how to take a product and add value. Bottled water is an example of a value-added product. Bottled water has skyrocked in price, costing $280 a barrel compared to $28 for oil.

Other speakers at the seminar held at the Farm and Home Center on Feb. 24, included Ronald Hanson, agribusiness professor; and John Blanchfield, manager of agricultureal banking and rural development for the American Bankers Association. Student remarks were heard from Jennifer Zimmerman, county FFA president, and Sarah Boyd, Superior 4-H award recipient for the county.

4-H HAPPENINGS

Berks County 4-H

The Berks County 4-H Sheep Club held its first two meetings on January 4 and February 1.

During the January meeting, the club held officer elections. Ashley Shollenberger, President; Cathy Levan, Vice President; Kelly Graeff, Treasurer; Amber Shollenberger, Secretary; Kim Angstat and Amanda Miller, News Reporters. After elections, the club discussed the meeting agenda for 2000.

The February meeting was a combined meeting with the beef and pig club. The first topic was a discussion about new activity books for each of the clubs. The sheep club was to begin using the new books and stop using the older blue activity books.

The new books will most likely be distributed at the March meeting. There are growth and development, finance, feeding, and many other sections to help 4-Hers with their projects.

The intermediate and advanced record books were distributed to the 4-Hers. These books will be used for both breeding and market lamb projects.

The club held a sign-up for livestock and meat judging teams. The combined club meeting ended with a private sheep meeting. The 4-Hers were reminded about upcoming meetings, including the March 8 meeting featuring a special feeds presentation.

Northampton County 4-H

The annual tack swap at the Northampton County 4-H Center will be held on Saturday, April 8, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. The Northampton County 4-H Center is located on Bushkill Center Road in Nazareth. The tack swap is open to anyone who wishes to sell or buy a wide variety of horse related items, apparel, and tack. All sellers must have a table area. No consignment items will be sold at the tack swap.

Sale areas will be offered to the public at a cost of $15 per table for the indoor area; $12 per table for the pole barn area; and $10 per "area" in the outdoor arena, weather permitting.

Anyone wishing to sell during the tack swap must preregister for spaces in the indoor and pole barn areas. Outdoor areas will be allocated the day of the event. Any item from small to large may be sold. No live animals will be allowed to be sold during this event. Persons with large equipment to sell are welcome to display it on the open grounds for the registration fee.

Food will be available during the tack swap courtesy of Backtrackers 4-H Horse and Pony Club. Anyone wanting further information, directions, or registration for this event should call (610) 837-7294.

The units were made in the 1960s to kill germs and for skin infections and sore throat, etc. The units are no longer manufactured, but someone may have one willing to sell. Phone (717) 292-6699.

QUESTION — Rebecca Beiler is searching for two original copies of the book, "Keeper of the Bees" by Gene Stratton Porter. Writer to her at 303 Jackson Rd., Quarryville, PA 17566.

QUESTION — Lawrence Krupp, Quakertown, wants to know how to clean white cloudy stains out of milk bottles.

QUESTION — Peg Koser, Lancaster, wants to know where to find the book "Aunt Nan and the Miller Five," by Esther Eby Glass.

QUESTION — Constance Becker, Cato, N.Y., is trying to locate replacement wire bales for old-style glass top canning jars in both regular and wide-mouth sizes. Anyone know of a supplier?

QUESTION — A Manchester reader wants patterns to crochet Barbie clothes. Call (717) 266-1044.

QUESTION — E. Rantonizy, Glassport, wants to know how to eliminate wild chrysanthenmums from gardens and lawns.

QUESTION — David Martin, New Holland, wants to know if anyone has purchased items from a mailorder company Haband of Peckville, Pa. The items look good on paper and are reasonably priced but is the quality good or cheap merchandise?

QUESTION — Joe Retkowski is looking for a shaker grate for a pot belly coal stove, which is stamped on the front: Big Boy No. 181, Birmingham Stove and Range Co., Birmingham, AL. Any information would be appreciated.

QUESTION — Al Lenki, Hamburg, wants a chart that tells how much oil is left in a tank by dipping it with a stick. Each inch accounts for so many gallons. At one time oil companies handed them out, but no longer do so. The chart is needed for a 275-gallon tank.

QUESTION — A York County reader wants to know what to use to pick up oil stains around furnace and grease stains in a garage or driveway.

QUESTION — Ralph Nissley wants to know where to get an Uncle Wiggly game.

QUESTION — B. Allgyer, Narvon, wants to buy two new or used oil cups for a Surge Alamo 30 vacuum pump. They hold about 6-8-ounces. You flip them down and unscrew them to fill.

QUESTION — Mrs. Alvin Peachey, 277 Peachey Ln. Fort Hill, PA 15540-2129, needs 63 flat lids to fit the rings of the two-piece jar lid sets — only the flat part is needed.

QUESTION — Ruth Bricker, 606 Nauvoo Rd., Lewisberry, PA 17339, has been hunting jar lids to fit 3-gallon and 5-gallon jars, which she thinks were pickle jars. Inside measurement is 5¼-inches.

QUESTION — Joni Michaels, Winfield, writes that her hobby is collecting reproduction clothing. She has access to some New Period patterns, but lately has been reproducing from original vintage clothing. Joni works full time and has little time to attend auctions. She buys from dealers occasionally, but they charge a lot and tend to use cleaning methods that eventually causes the cloth to deteriote. Joni prefers to use the old, just out of the attic but not cleaned clothing. She will clean it herself.

Joni wants original pre-1960 clothing

Complete Registered Holstein Dispersal

(Approx: 150 Head)

Friday, March 24, 2000 - 11:00 AM

Located in Cortland Co., New York - From Rt. 81, take Tully Exit (14), Go South 2 miles on Rt. 281, Watch for Auction Signs on Sale Day.

After 48 Great Years in the Registered Holstein Business, Bill and Jeanne Underwood have decided to hang up the milkers, and do a little traveling and visit the many friends which they have made in the business.

Bill has been fortunate to breed and develop many outstanding animals over the years, including:

Many of the Animals Selling are Descendants of These Great Cows!

The Dairy is milked in tie stalls and are housed in free stalls - Approximately 40% are milking in their first Lactation, and 30% are Second and Third Timers. (7) are now milking over 100 Lbs., (10) good, young dry Cows, and (10) Close Springing heifers, plus (25) sell recently fresh.

A FEW TO WATCH INCLUDE:

A Super good "Charles", Now Ex-90" as a 3 Yr. Old, to be scored again before Sale - has a 3 Yr. record of 307 Days 20.957M 738F 681P, Dam is "EX" Astro Jet, who also sells with other 25,000M.

A fancy bred heifer by "Elevation", due after Sale to a Sexation son.

A September "99 Rudolph" heifer that will show, from a "V.G. Starbuck", 2nd Dam a "VG Warden"

SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE IN THIS AUCTION!!

If you want a mature "EX" cow to milk and raise heifers from - she's here!

If you need 100 Lb. from a young cow, she's here! If you are looking for a winning show age calf - she's here, too! If you need a 2 Yr. Old to milk, show, and raise a family from, we have her!

Truly there is something for everyone's taste, needs, and pocketbook selling in this auction.

Linjet, Rudolph, Skybuck, Rorae, Juror, Silver, SWD, Astro Jet, Horace, Delaware, and Melvin.

Old Toy Trains
Toy Train Parts
Toy Train Accessories
Track, Transformers, & Switches

10 A.M. SATURDAY, MARCH 11, 2000

(Exhibition Fri. Eve. 7-9, Sat. Morning 8-10)

RIDGE FIRE COMPANY

Along Rt. 23, Between Phoenixville, PA, and Rt. 100

A rather unusual toy train auction for us, since most of the goods will be sold without a list, country style. First off, we do have a decent collection of American Flyer S Gage, which we will sell right away. After that, we do two things: sell out the parts department of a 25-year-old train store from Baltimore, then sift through the dregs of a 40-year collection from Trenton. What we have is all kinds of trains from 1920 to 1980 to repair or restore or to use as parts salvage. You will see lots of great old stuff!

A 10% Buyer's Premium Will Be Applied.
